Soviet Says U. S. Dollars Built Hitler's War Industry

Russian Answer To Publication of Secret Documents Assails Big Three

By Walter Cronkite

Moscow (Tuesday), Feb. 10 (U.P.) (By Telephone to New York)—Soviet Russia, replying to the secret documents on Russian-German diplomatic relations made public by the United States, charged today that the United States, Great Britain and France made World War II possible by financing Adolf Hitler's war machine and appeasing Germany.

The United States did the financing, Russia said, and Britain and France, the appeasing.

The reply came—nearly three weeks after publication of secret documents taken from captured German foreign office records—in a 6000-word statement entitled "Falsifiers of History—a Historical Note." The statement was marked "More to Follow."

"Other Side" Promised

Also, the reply promised that Russia will publish documents which will put Russo-German relations in their true perspective.

Russia said the United States department documents gave only the German side of the picture. The true reason for their publication, it said, was "to present a distorted picture of events, to heap lies on the Soviet Union, to slander it and undermine the international influence of the Soviet Union as a truly democratic and staunch fighter against aggressive and anti-Democratic forces.

Further, "United States ruling circles" used the State Department documents "to undermine, by means of their campaign of slander against the Soviet Union, progressive elements in their own country who advocate better relations with the Soviet Union" in view of the approaching presidential election.

Going on to attack prewar policies of the present Big Three western allies, Russia said they had aided German imperialism in preparing for World War II.

"A golden rain of American dollars fertilized Adolf Hitler's war industry," the reply said, "and Great Britain and France appeased Germany diplomatically."

"What would have happened if the United States had not financed German heavy industry and Britain and France had not rejected collective security but on the other hand had organized resistance to the German aggressors?" the reply asked.

Russians Offer Answer

"The result would have been that the Hitlerites would have lacked armaments. The Hitlerite annexation policy would have been caught against collective security and the Hitlerite chances of unleashing a second world war would have been reduced to a minimum.

"If, in spite of unfavorable conditions, the Hitlerites had still ventured to unleash the Second World War, they would have been defeated in the first year."

The documents of which the Russians complained were found by the United States Ninth Division of the First Army in the Harz mountains of Germany in April, 1945. They covered the course of Russian-German relations from April, 1939, up to the time Germany attacked Russia June 21, 1941.

They indicated—from the German side—that Russia had made the first move to better the long bitter relations between the two countries. They continued on through the dramatic signature on August 23, 1939, of a German-Russian nonaggression treaty, nine days before Germany attacked Poland, the division of Poland and discussions on splitting up Europe into spheres of influence. Finally there was the letter of Hitler to

James W. Bellah To Speak at Book Luncheon

James Warner Bellah, author of many novels and magazine serials, will be the fourth speaker at The Washington Post's book and author luncheon scheduled for Wednesday, February 18, at the Hotel Statler. Bellah's "Ward 20" was published in 1945. His new book, "The Irregular Gentleman," is being released the day after the luncheon.

Others on the panel of authors to speak at the luncheon are Charles Hurd, author of "Washington Cavalcade"; Michael F. Reilly, coauthor of "Reilly of the White House," and Agnes Sligh Turnbull, author of "The Bishop's Mantle." Tickets for the luncheon are on sale at book and department stores.

Hearings Due to End Today

Frank Jelleff, Other Leaders In City Affairs, Back Rule Bill

Frank R. Jelleff | Mrs. C. D. Lowe | Charles C. Glover III

By Edward Ryan
Post Reporter

Frank R. Jelleff, prominent Washington merchant, told Congress yesterday the Auchincloss-Ball Home Rule bill is an "excellent plan, and all the citizens of the District should get behind it."

Several other prominent new recruits to the home-rule drive joined Jelleff in doing what he urged—they strongly backed the bill as the Joint Congressional hearings on it went into the second week. The hearings, in the House Caucus room, will continue at 9:30 a. m. today and are slated to end with the afternoon session.

Among those who joined in the call for home rule were Dr. Paul Douglass, president of American University; Elmer Davis, radio news broadcaster and formally head of the Office of War Information; Mrs. C. D. Lowe, president of the District Tuberculosis Association and former head of the District Congress of Parents and Teachers.

Charles C. Glover, 3d, lawyer and grandson of the Charles C. Glover, who was president of Riggs Bank and was chiefly responsible for establishing Rock Creek Park and other District park areas, testified for the bill as representative of the newly formed Washington Home Rule Committee.

For the same group, Samuel Spencer, also a lawyer, presented a brief strongly supporting the Joint Committee view that the home-rule bill and the legislative system it sets up will be constitutional. This view had been challenged by District Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, and others. Spencer's statement was jointly prepared by himself and four other lawyers here: W. Graham Clayton, jr., Lloyd W. Cutler, Gerhard A. Gesell, and A. Lloyd Symington.

School Board Plan Hit

Also testifying for the home rule plan were L. Corrin Strong, prominent in civic and philanthropic work; Richard H. Wilmer, Washington lawyer; J. Bernard Wychoff, former head of the Washington Housing Association; and Merlo J. Pusey, associate editor of The Washington Post. All but Glover and Spencer spoke as individuals.

In the afternoon session, five witnesses headed by Albert W. Atwood, president of Washington's Library Board of Trustees, urged that an independent library board be retained under home rule. The bill would place a single elected school board in charge of both schools and libraries.

Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, presented the school board's previously announced stand against having the paid, elected school board proposed in the bill. She also renewed her earlier statement of personal support for the elected school board plan.

Gallinger Gets High Praise On Low Funds

Sweeney, Nursing Corps Commended In Board Report

By Dorothea Andrews
Post Reporter

Gallinger Hospital needs money to solve its problems.

That was the conclusion yesterday of the Board of Visitors to Municipal Hospitals, who reported to Commissioner Guy Mason on Gallinger Hospital.

"In spite of lack of funds, lack of appreciation, lack of everything that could encourage the staff, a good job is being done and will continue to be done under the present administration."

The visitors' board is composed of Renah F. Camalier, chairman; Mrs. C. Ashmead Fuller, Mrs. Montgomery Blair, Mrs. Willis W. Jones, Mrs. William North Sturtevant, Dr. Earl L. Harrison and Dr. Edward G. Latch.

Sweeney Commended

In commending Dr. Alvin R. Sweeney, hospital superintendent, the board declared: "An examination of the budget estimates and allowances for the past years shows his keen understanding of the needs and a lack somewhere else of necessity for the appropriation of funds to accomplish those needs."

The board, while not contending that "all is perfect" at Gallinger, told Mason:

"Any one with any knowledge of institutional operation will realize that all hospitals are unable to get help and that nursing schools are not being filled. This condition is Nation-wide. The nursing corps at Gallinger is doing a herculean task with meager facilities and numbers. We find the hospital exceptionally clean, free of vermin and unpleasant odors. We find patients in all departments clean, well-fed and well-cared for, and in a happy frame of mind."

Problem Called Enormous

Terming the Gallinger Hospital problem enormous, even in the face of "vast and continuous improvements in all directions," the board recommended that painters, carpenters, plumbers, tile setters, floor mechanics and other artisans and custodial employes "should be tem-

White House Orders GSI To Bargain

Truman Reported Determined to End 36-Day Strike at 42 U. S. Cafeterias

By Frank Wilder
Post Reporter

The White House has ordered Federal Works Administrator Philip B. Fleming to require Government Services, Inc., to bargain with the union that is striking against 42 GSI cafeterias.

A high Administration source said the orders were given Friday with the determination that the 36-day-old strike be settled.

It was the second step the White House has taken in the dispute. On January 20, President Truman told Secretary of Labor Lewis B. Schwellenbach to do what he could to settle it.

"Moral" Issue Removed

In response to Schwellenbach's request officers of the striking union, Local 471 of the CIO Restaurant Workers, filed non-Communist affidavits Friday. The union's president, Richard A. Bancroft, resigned earlier.

This removed the "moral" issue which, the Government source told The Washington Post, was viewed by the White House as the main obstacle to collective bargaining.

Maj. Gen. Fleming—who has the power to terminate GSI's contract with the Government for operation of the cafeterias—would not comment last night.

GSI has refused to sit down for new contract negotiations ever since November 28, when the union asked for a 15-cent hourly increase.

GSI's Position

As of yesterday, GSI's position was that it will not bargain with Local 471 until: (1) the non-Communist affidavits are also filed by Local 471's parent union, the United Public Workers of America, and (2) Local 471 wins a National Labor Relations Board election. Whaot is more, GSI insists that such an election must be conducted only among the 1300 new employes the corporation has hired to replace strikers.

Meanwhile yesterday a group within UPWA demanded that the union's officers take the non-Communist oath or resign. In a letter to UPWA's executive board, the build-the-union committee said filing of the affidavits would "strengthen the bargaining position' 'of Local 471 in its "struggle with the union-busting GSI."

Statement Attacked

Alfred Bernstein, UPWA director of negotiations, attacked the statement as "not representative of any appreciable number of UPWA members."

The Build-the-Union Committee was formed here last October 26 to fight alleged Communist leanings of UPWA leaders. Its chairman, Robert Halbeisen, is vice president of Detroit's Local 191, the union that demanded last week that UPWA president Abram Flaxer file the affidavit or resign.

South Urged To Run Own Candidate

Eastland Proposes Action as Truman Reaffirms Stand Against 'Jim Crow'

By Robert C. Albright
Post Reporter

A Mississippi Democrat yesterday proposed the South put up its own candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination, if necessary, to halt the Administration's anti "Jim Crow" drive.

Senator James O. Eastland told the Senate a Dixie holdout in the electoral college "at the very least" would put a stop to the drive and might even elect a Southern President if the contest is thrown into the House.

Eastland's threat to block the nomination of President Truman carried the Southern demonstration against the Administration's anti-discrimination program into its second straight week.

White House Won't Retreat

The speech followed White House refusal to "retreat" from any of the 10 civil rights proposals the President sent to Congress, including the proposed ban on racial segregation in interstate transportation.

Presidential Secretary Charles G. Ross denied published reports that Mr. Truman would drop his recommendation against "Jim Crowism" in interstate travel.

Ross said the story "was made out of the whole cloth." He said the President is not dropping any of his recommendations and is not retreating from any of them.

Other Developments

1. Representative Stephen Pace (D., Ga.) told the House Southern Democrats must "first try to prevent being driven out of our own party or keep it from adopting new policies and principles which disregard our interests and welfare. Our success in these efforts will determine in good measure our future course of action.

2. A Southern Democratic Senator, who asked not to be quoted by name, said the Republican Senate now has the cloture votes to break up any filibuster against anti-lynching, anti-poll tax or F. E. P. C. legislation. He said surveys showed only two or three Republican Senators would vote with Southern Democrats against cloture—not enough to avert a two-thirds majority to close off debate.

3. Democratic National Chairman J. Howard McGrath (R. I.) was reported ready to carry a defense of the President's civil rights program into Southern territory, in a speech at a Jackson-Jefferson day dinner at Atlanta, Ga., March 5.

Many Expect Agreement

Despite Eastland's proposal of a Southern "veto" on any pro-civil rights candidate, many Southern legislators took the view that the current upheaval will be worked out within the party as it always has before.

These expected the usual party harmony demonstrations to follow in the wake of the current heat. What delayed the reunion, and fanned fresh talk of a bolt, was the decision of Southern governors in Wakulla Springs, Fla., last week to take their plaint to Washington and meet again in 40 days.

Said one highly placed Senate Administration Democrat: "We can't do a thing until this cools off . . . It's like an open sore."

In his Senate attack on the President's civil rights program, Eastland said the South has a weapon stronger than the two-thirds rule it once used in party conventions to influence the nomination.

Said Eastland:

"All we have to do is to refuse to vote the ticket. Give our electoral votes to some other candidate. We can call the turn. We can dictate the party's policies."

He said the South needs to adopt

78 Years Wiser

Bureau's Birthday Message: 'Cloudy With Continued Cold'

Cloudy and continued cold today, with clearing skies this afternoon was the Weather Bureau's seventy-eighth anniversary message to Washington last night.

The forecaster said he was too busy predicting how close a Southern snowfall would come to the District to note yesterday's date until he was reminded that on February 9, 1870, Congress authorized the setting up of the weather outfit.

At late reckoning, he said, he calculated the snow would miss this city, the overnight temperature low would be 14 degrees, this afternoon's high would be about 28 degrees, tonight will be colder, and tomorrow will show increasing cloudiness and won't be so cold.

Yesterday's temperature ranged from a high of 22 degrees at four minutes after Sunday midnight to 15 degrees at 7:54 a. m. Yesterday afternoon it rose only to 20, at 1:58 p. m., before dropping again. A cold, cloudy days was predicted, scoring another hit for the weatherman. His February batting average now shows six hits, three misses—.667.

Despite long-continued subfreezing weather, the Potomac River was reported navigable for tugs and barges to Key Bridge, and work was still progressing on the new Highway Bridge. Here a construction company ship has managed to keep a clear lane for pile-driving and installation of steel pile coffer dams for the bridge foundations. Only concrete pourings have been stopped by the cold, said a construction executive.

Cold weather persisted yesterday in the Mid-West and New England. It was 17 degrees below zero at Madison, Wis., and 15 below at Portland, Me. Chicago registered 2 above zero and New York City showed a minimum of 12.

A light cold rain chilled the Gulf States eastward from Louisiana to South Carolina, with Birmingham, Ala., reporting a low of 35 and El Paso, Tex., 28.

Snow blanketed western North Carolina and upper South Carolina, and the Weather Bureau said a general fall ranging from 4 to 8 inches was in prospect for the area.

Truman Going On Caribbean Trip Feb. 20

Itinerary Includes Puerto Rico and Virgin Islands

By Edward T. Folliard
Post Reporter

President Truman will leave February 20 for a long-delayed tour of Caribbean islands, the White House announced yesterday.

Mr. Truman will visit Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and the United States naval base at Guantanamo Bay, Cuba. Thereafter he will take a rest at Key West, Fla., and return to Washington on March 5.

It will be the Chief Executive's sixth trip away from the United States proper. The first was his journey to Potsdam for the Big Three meeting in 1945. Then followed trips to Bermuda, Mexico City, Ottawa and Rio de Janeiro.

Missouri Speech May 5

White House Press Secretary Charles G. Ross also announced yesterday that Mr. Truman had made tentative plans to speak at Columbia, Mo., on May 5 in connection with journalism week exercises at the University of Missouri. Memorial services are to be held that day for the late Lietutenant Governor William R. Painter, an old friend of Mr. Truman and past president of the Missouri Press Association. Frank L. Mott, dean of the Journalism School at the University of Missouri, visited the White House yesterday to extend the invitation.

On the night of February 19, Mr. Truman is to speak at the Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner at the Mayflower.

His 14-day trip to the South will begin next morning. He will use the Presidential plane, Sacred Cow, and the yacht, Williamsburg.

President's Itinerary

The itinerary, as given out at the White House, follows:

February 20—Leave Washington at 10 a. m. and fly to Key West, arriving about 2:30 p. m. Spend night in commandant's house at United States submarine base.

February 21—Leave Key West and fly to San Juan, Puerto Rico, arriving about 10:30 o'clock San Juan time. Luncheon with Gov. Jesus Pinero, and probably a speech. Spend the night aboard the Williamsburg, which will be anchored in San Juan harbor.

February 22—Sail for St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands at 5 a. m., arriving in Port Charlotte Amalie about 10 a. m. Luncheon with the

75,000 Gallons Added To D. C. Stockpile, Kennedy Reports

By Murrey Marder
Post Reporter

A proposed ban on fuel oil for "nonessential" users was postponed yesterday on a "day-to-day" basis.

Following a meeting yesterday with members of his advisory committee, Fuel Oil Coordinator J. Thomas Kennedy said "we're going to try to get by the way we are going—as long as we can."

The order his committee considered for recommendation to the District Commissioners would have barred fuel oil from night clubs, theaters, bowling alleys and similar establishments.

Embargo Ordered

As for the national fuel crisis, the Commerce Department ordered an embargo, effective today, on all fuel oil exports from East Coast cities.

That action, which does not affect shipments from other points, came as Interior Secretary Krug told the House Public Land Committee that an "even more widespread and severe" oil shortage may develop in event of abnormally cold weather.

The District's almost-exhausted emergency stockpile of oil yesterday was boosted by a set-aside of 50,000 gallons from one supplier, and 25,000 gallons from another unidentified company.

Allotments Made

Last night, however, L. P. Steuart & Bro., which supplies an estimated 22 per cent of this area's homes and has been the hardest hit of the local distributors, again exhausted its supplies of oil loaned by other companies, Kennedy said.

"We're going to have to meet that situation, again, in the morning," he said.

To ease the pressure on his staff, engulfed in "hardship" requests for oil from the entire metropolitan area, Kennedy said he yesterday allotted 10,000 gallons of oil and 1000 gallons of kerosene from the District emergency stockpile to Alexandria, and the same amount to Fairfax County.

The fuel, he said, will be distributed by the respective police departments, following investigations.

Hog, Cattle Jam Creates Sharp Break In Prices

Raisers Frightened By Drop in Grain, Now Rising Again; 'Dip' to Be Probed

By John W. Ball
Post Reporter

Livestock raisers, frightened by last week's crash in grain prices, flooded the Nation's stockyards with cattle and hogs yesterday, causing the sharpest decline in meat on the hoof in 16 months.

The break in livestock prices was the highlight of a day filled with sensational developments involving the Nation's markets.

1. Grain prices reversed their four-day plunge downward, with several futures contracts closing the permissible limit upward.

2. While the markets were churning about trying to decide which way to go, the House committee investigating market speculation announced it would start an immediate probe of the recent breaks.

Chairman August Andresen (R., Minn.) said the committee wants to know the "names and extent of operations of those who had profited through advance information of the break."

3. The rise in corn was momentarily halted in midmorning when news reached the grain pits that a subcommittee of the Joint Committee on the Economic Report had approved restricting the use of grain for liquor making until October 30.

4. Later, after the markets had closed, the full committee approved the subcommittee's action, but left it to legislative committees to determine whether Congress wishes to impose a formula for the allocation of grain to the various distillers. Hearings by both House and Senate committees are expected promptly.

5. Meantime, the Administration sharply criticized proposed action by the Chicago Board of Trade to reduce margin requirements (down payments) on grain speculation.

In doing so, Agriculture Secretary Anderson hinted that part of last week's sudden drop in grain prices was due to bear raids. On Wednesday, he said, the first day of the wide-open break in prices, "one leading speculator" sold a million bushels short.

Directors of the Board of Trade met yesterday after the market closed and later announced no action was taken.

Requirements Raised

Last October 6, the markets raised margin requirements from about 17 per cent to 33 1-3 per cent of the amount involved in dealings in grain for future delivery. In a telegram Saturday to President Truman, J. O. McClintock, president of the Board of Trade, said that that action had "caused a contraction of the open interest" and the market had been "robbed of much of its liquidity."

"Due to the lack of adequate hedging possibilities," he wired, "farmers are being unduly penalized by not being able to sell their grain at country elevators because during the three last successive days markets at times have dropped the full permissible trading limits."

Detailed Developments

In detail yesterday's developments were as follows:

LIVESTOCK: Hogs slipped $2 to $4 and more a hundred pounds, with the top at $22.25, the lowest since January 6, 1947—more than 13 months ago. Cattle followed with decreases of 50 cents to $3. Lambs dropped 75 cents to $1.

Receipts were so heavy that thousands remained unsold at the Chicago stockyards at the close. With 4000 hogs and from 3000 to 5000 cattle left over, traders looked for another heavy market today, when an expected avalanche of 15,000 hogs and 7000 cattle are expected.

The break was the most marked

Newly Perfected Heart Valve Operation Saves 'Doomed' Rheumatic Fever Victim

Performed as Last Resort on Girl's Plea

Charleston, S. C., Feb. 9 (AP).—A new heart operation, which offers hope to rheumatic fever victims and others whose diseases have clogged valves inside their hearts, was performed successfully here 10 days ago by Dr. Horace G. Smithy, assistant professor of surgery at the Medical College of South Carolina, he reported today. His patient is up, walking around and apparently nearly well.

He said operations on heart valves have not been attempted since the 1920s. In all those attempts one patient lived, he said, but was not benefited.

His patient is Betty Lee Woolridge, 21, of Canton, Ohio, a virtual invalid since an attack of rheumatic fever when she was 18. After the second of two severe heart attacks a few months ago, she was advised she could be expected to die within a year.

Last September she read of experimental work on heart valves of animals at the medical college here. There was no human surgery and no prediction human treatment would come soon.

On her appeals, an operation was arranged for. Expenses were underwritten by the Crippled Children's Society and the Rotary Club of Canton.

The girl came here by plane January 18. She weighed then 85 pounds.

"She was in very poor condition," Dr. Smithy said. "She didn't look like she could stand any kind of operation."

The scar in the heart value interfered with flow of blood from one main heart chamber to the other. She had to be propped on three pillows to breathe. Veins in her neck stood out like cords.

Associated Press WIREPHOTO
BETTY LEE WOOLRIDGE.

Patient Seems Nearly Well 10 Days Later

He made a purse-string suture, or sewing, on the heart muscle. This was so that when the rod was thrust through into the heart, the string could be pulled to tighten the outer heart tissues all around the rod. This was to minimize bleeding.

The heart was held in the surgeon's hand while this purse-string suture was put in place.

The valve-cutting instrument, designed by Dr. Smithy and associates, was made by the college machinists. When the instrument was inserted into the heart, Dr. Smithy worked it by feel until the point was on or in the valve.

Heart valves are 'openings fringed with flaps of tissue, called cusps. When the heart contracts these leaves come together, closing the valve. When the heart expands, they separate, leaving an opening. The scarring fastens the edges of the cusps together, so that they no longer open freely. Dr. Smithy's probe cut away these adhesions, or part of them.

He said that danger of disturbing the heart rhythm was offset by injecting novacaine in the heart muscle. Improved anesthesia, he said, and better surgical techniques and means of preventing shock, all of which the medical profession has worked out in recent years, he said were aids.

After the instrument was withdrawn from the heart, the purse string was pulled tight.

The operation is known as aortic valvulotomy.

Paths of Both Smoothed

Taft and Vandenberg Reach 'Understanding' on Aid Plans

By Ferdinand Kuhn
Post Reporter

Before leaving on his western tour last night Senator Robert A. Taft reached a friendly understanding with Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg on the European Recovery Program.

The two Republican leaders—one paramount in domestic policy, the other in the foreign field—did not make a "deal," it was learned on good authority yesterday, and did not commit themselves definitely.

But Vandenberg now knows that Taft will not be too troublesome in the coming Senate debate on European recovery.

And Taft, for his part, knows that Vandenberg will make every effort to meet the honest doubts of those middle-of-the-road Republican Senators who have been critical or fearful of the program.

As to the cost, Vandenberg is still trying to find some way of keeping actual appropriations for the next fiscal year within the spending ceiling fixed by a joint congressional committee, and without hurting European recovery in the process.

This ceiling was 2½ billion dollars lower than President Truman's budget figure. The bulk of the savings was expected to come from domestic rather than from foreign spending.

Vandenberk is still considering various schemes and has asked State Department officals to estimate their probable effect on European recovery. One of these, by no means accepted as yet, is to appropriate only enough to carry the program until the new Congress joined the school board in urging that teachers be left their present separate retirement system instead of being placed under the civil service retirement system.

Jo V. Morgan, lawyer, and former member "sole" of the District's board of tax appeals, urged leaving that agency as it is, and opposed the bill's provision for a part-time three-member board of tax appeals.

Jelleff's testimony was in sharp contrast to that given last week by John A. Reilly, president of the Washington Board of Trade, who said he opposed pure home rule without national representation.

After 38 years in the District, said Jelleff, "I am enthusiastic at the prospect of being able to vote for our own government."

Calls Plebiscite "Stalling".

He took issue, too, with the Trade Board's demand for a referendum on any home-rule bill passed by Congress. "I think the people have registered their desire to vote many times," said Jelleff. "Asking for another plebiscite seems to be like stalling."

Jelleff also told the committee, "I am not afraid the city will get hopelessly in debt under home rule, because you and we are too smart to let that happen. I don't like the idea of people voting here without paying an income tax here, but I hope Congress will find a way to correct that. I think the plan as a whole is good, and the bill should be passed now. If all the terrible things happen that people say are going to happen, it will cost me as a businessman a lot of money in taxes, but I'm not afraid of that either. I think it will cost less."

Finally, Jelleff told the committee "I shall keep on working, too, to get you people to pass a bill giving us national representation."

Taxpayers Want to Vote

The bill would give Washington an elected council and elected school board. A council-appointed manager would take charge of 12 major departments. The school board would run the schools and libaries. The council could enact ordinances, but major legislation would be "proposed" by the council, and would become law only if neither house of Congress nor Congress nor the President vetoed it.

Glover told the committee "we contribute to the seupport of the District government by paying taxes. We would like to contribute to the development of this city by voting and participating in local affairs."

He praised Congress for the role it has played in District affairs: "We want you to know that there are citizens in Washington who appreciate the work you have done. But we want you to know that we appreciate most the work you are doing here and now to inaugurate home rule.

Praises Bills Preparation

"What we want you to believe is this: We can di the chores you are doing for the District . . . And being human, we will be much more satisfied with the result if we do this job ourselves than if you do it for us."

The morning lineup backed the bill unanimously, although individuals recommended various possible amendments on details.

Wilmer declared "I believe firmly that the people of the District would have a vote in their own government. I hope this is but the start toward being able to vote in national elections. This bill is one of the best prepared pieces of legislation I have seen."

He attacked the idea first proposed by Mrj. Gen. U. S. Grant 3d, chairman ofNational Capital Park and Planning Commission, that Washington's chief executive under home rule be a governor appointed by the President.

"Negro Domination" Answered

General Grant's idea was backed by the committee of 100 on the Federal City, but Mrs. Lowe testified yesterday she was one of three members of that committee who voted against its home-rule report. "I'm convinced a majority of citizens want a voice in their government," she said. "The whole present system of our local government is slow, ponderous and inefficient."

Davis said he was appearing as "merely a citizen who would like to vote—New York let me vote for 30 years without ill effect."

Dr. Douglass said the stronges! opposition is among those who fear home rule would lead to Negro domination. He said that in the week of Abraham Lincoln's birthday, he would answer that objection by saying that all persons born or naturalized in the United States are "our fellow citizens." He declared he has "unqualified and unequivocal faith in the bill."

Wyckoff cited housing problems in Washington and charged that the present city government has demonstrated that it is unresponsive to the people. He said this would be corrected if District residents had a voice in their own government.

Rebuts "Half-a-Loaf" Criticism

Strong said that as a taxpayer he would very much like to have a voice in how the taxes he pays are to be spent. As the father of three sons, he said, "I find it difficult to inculcate into them the necessity of civic responsibility living in voteless Washington."

Pusey cited the argument of previous witnesses that home rule without national representation would be "half a loaf."

"This bill is a whole loaf so far as Congress can act on home rule by legislation" said Pusey. "This si a full measure of home rule."

While testifying mainly on the library board, George F. Bowerman, former superintendent of District public libraries, said he believed in home rule and "in the main" supported the bill. Others who testified on the library control issue were Mrs. Philip Sidney Smith, member of both the school and library boards; Miss Agnes Winn, of the District Branch, American Association of University Women, and Paul Howard, director of the National Relations Office of the American Library Association.

Mrs. Doyle made clear she joined with the school board in opposing many changes in the school system proposed in the bill, and differed with the board only on the issue of electing the members. "I have worked for national representation and it should come first. I do believe in home rule and I favor the council-manager type of government. As a part of home rule, I believe in an elected school board," said Mrs. Doyle.

porarily drawn from other services of the District of Columbia and put to work to complete the job at Gallinger."

Emphasizing that its report made yesterday "is not a final or a complete report," the Board of Visitors told Mason it would inspect Gallinger again "within the next few days" and submit a further report at that time, "touching upon other alleged conditions now obtaining, for which the board feels there are no justifiable grounds but which have been the subject of discussion among various groups both in and outside of Washington."

Wide Gap Pointed Out

Calling attention to the wide gap between Gallinger needs and budgets, the Board of Visitors stated that in the 1947, 1948 and 1949 budgets, Dr. Sweeney had asked for four cooks and had been denied his request each time.

In addition, only $9000 of $29,308 was allowed in the 1949 budget for new food carts and ohter equipment. The hospital asked for 677 new employes, including 438 nurses, and got only 28. It has only 76 employes in the psychopathic ward and needs 113.

The report pointed particularly to the fact that the food at the hospital, while "well-cooked and plentiful" is still carried by hand because the elevators are not running.

"Dr. Sweeney and this board have requested their repair and operation since 1945," the board told Mason, "and in this connection it should be remembered that the elevators have never been in operation and that in order to rehabilitate them at this time it is necessary that new equipment throughout be purchased and installed.

See Incalculable Loss

"No delay should be countenanced in obtaining this needed equipment, and the loss in not making them available years ago is incalculable when cost and loss of service is considered."

Commissioner Mason said yesterday he had no comment on the report. He declared, however, that he wanted to make it perfectly clear that he had never asked for Dr. Sweeney's resignation and added that there has never been any criticism of the medical attention available at Gallinger.

Mason described the medical, surgical and obstetrics departments at Gallinger as "as good as any in the country."

Strike Agitation Appears Failure In South Korea

Seoul, Korea, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Communist agitation for a general strike in South Korea appeared to have failed today, but American military authorities said they expected further violent outbreaks which claimed 17 lives over the weekend.

Korean police reported a Communist gang planned to raid American installations and Lieut. Gen. John R. Hodge ordered a curfew between 11 p. m. and 5 a. m.

Taft and Vandenberg Reach 'Understanding' on Aid Plans

meets in January—which means after the election.

ERP Cut More Likely

But theer are seroius Republican doubts about such a course, on the ground that it would be a transparent trick and a evasion of the responsibility of this Congress. Some Republicans on Capitol Hill believe an honest cut would be much less dangerous to ERP if it could be kept within bounds.

In any case, a cut in ERP is more likely now that the proposed aid-to-China programm has soared to 570 million dollars, with added military help for Greece and Turkey in prospect as well.

As to the administration of ERP, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee began in executive session yesterday to write this section of the coming bill. Senator Walter F. George of Georgia, a Democratic member, reported "general agreement" on the ERP agency outside the State Department.

This is the plan proposed by the Brookings Institution, calling for a separate government agency under an administrator of Cabinet rank, with no veto power for the State Department except by recourse to the President. It appears to have met many Republican doubts and is likely to be written into the Senate bill with minor changes.

But the Vandenberg committee also is expected to stress business-like administration, partly because of its own strong convictions and partly to satisfy one of the most insistent doubts of Taft and oher Republican Senators. The final bill is likely to give the whole project a stronger "business" flavor than the draft proposed by President Truman last December.

There will be a special effort to give a soudn banking basis to whatever loans may be made to Europe, as distinct from gree grants. When President John J. McCloy of the World Bank, testified in the recent hearings, he warned against making "fuzzy" loans which might or might not be repaid. He advised against making any loans that were not sound business propositions.

On the other hand, many Republicans notably Representative Christian A. Herter (R., Mass.) insist that all "capital goods," such as factory equipment, be provided on a repayable loan basis.

Vandenberg and his committee are by no means ready to draw such a sharp distinction in their bill. They have heard many warnings that some countries, like Austria and Greece, need capital goods without being able to repay in the foreseeable future, whereas others will be well able to pay cash or repay in due course for whatever they may need.

The process of writing the Senate bill may take two weeks, with February 21 reported as the earliest possible date of finishing the job. When the administrative sections of the bill are finished, the committee will turn to writing the general principles, including the broad commitments that will be binding upon the western European countries.

It is a safe guess that this section of the bill will contailn stronger language than in the Administrations draft. Vandenberg said repeatedly during the hearings that the continuity of American aid would be made strictly dependent on the continuity of European self-help—and he meant it. Later the committe will have have to tackle the cost, in the form of a 15-month authorization, and other prickly questions such as the specific conditions to be attached to American aid.

Vandenberg said yesterday no official announcements of the committee'se decisions would be made until it acted on "definite sections of the bill."

Stop at St. Croix

February 23—Leave St. Thomas and sail to St. Croix, another of the Virgin Islands, about 40 miles away. Reception at St. Croix, after which the Williamburg will begin a leisurely 45-hour trip to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba.

February 25—Arrive at Guantanamo Bay. Inspection of the naval base and luncheon at the Officers Club. At 2 p. m., the President will board the Sacred Cow and fly to Key West, arriving about 5 p. m.

If conditions permit, Mr. Truman will remain at Key West until the morning of March 5, then fly to Washington.

Secretary Ross said Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson and Secretary of the Interior J. A. Krug will join the President at San Juan and remain with his party until the visit to St. Croix.

A presidential visit to San Juan has been talked about for a year or so. Mr. Truman had hoped to go there on his way back from Rio last autumn, but matters having to do with the Marshall Plan caused a postponement.

South Urged To Split Party

the "play hard to get" strategy followed, he said, by "a few thousand organized people from minority groups in the North who run this country."

His answer to "Where can the South go?" he said was: "I can go to the electoral college."

"By withholding her electoral votes the South can defeat in 1948 any Democratic candidate," he told the Senate.

"In fact, no candidate would be nominated if it were known that he would not receive the South's electoral votes. The machines of the North which control the party are not crazy. They will nominate no candidate whose defeat is certain.

South Urged to Act

"If the South should support a Southern candidate for President, the election this year would in all probability be thrown in the House of Representatives. If this were done, I am confident a Southerner would the President.

"A Republican would vote for a Southern Democrat before he would vote for a Northern Democrat. A New Deal Northern Democrat would cast his vote for a Southern Democrat before he would cast his vote for a Republican. If the South would but act, some great Southern leader can become President of the United States."

Pace in his House speech said the party's leadership feels so certain of the Southern vote they "think they can cast any insult, violate tradition or trample any principle of our people with complete impunity."

No GOP Help Seen

But he warned House Southerners they can expect little comfort from Republicans.

Said Pace: "President Truman set out to outdo Henry Wallace, and now the Republicans, in control of both houses, are preparing to press the measures for passage. We will get no help from them either now or hereafter."

Representative Oren Harris (D., Ark.) made public a letter he write the President requesting Mr. Truman to "refrain" from further insistence on enactment of the civil rights program.

Harris said, "It is much better to resolve these controversial issues within the party" and added, "To ignore this great segment of our party coud well cause anothe revolt in many States as we have experienced in the past."

Wherry Assails Truman on Prices

Senate Whip Says President's Actions Reveal a 'Miserably Perplexed Man'

Nashville, Tenn., Feb. 9 (U.P.)—Senate Republican Whip Kenneth S. Wherry of Nebraska said tonight that President Truman is a "bewildered, confounded and miserably perplexed man" who one minute seeks controls to keep prices down and the next lets his lieutenants talk them up.

Wherry gave the administration a raking over at a Lincoln Day dinner at the Maxwell House. He said in a prepared address that the American people "have had enough" and will elect a Republican Congress and President this year.

He drew on Abraham Lincoln's criticism of another president to show how he regarded Mr. Truman.

Wheat Action Cited

"Applying the words of Lincoln," Wherry said, "The President is in no wise satisfied with his own position. First he takes up one, and in attempting to argue us into it he argues himself out of it . . . His mind, taxed beyond its power, is running hither and thither like some tortured creature on a burning surface . . . He is a bewildered, confounded, and miserably perplexed man."

Wherry said this view of the President applied to Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson's recent statement that the Government might soon buy an additional 50 million bushels of wheat.

"One moment the President advocates the imposition of price controls to lower prices, and, in the next, he has the Secretary of Agriculture announce the purchase of 50 million bushels of wheat which would prevent a fall in the market."

Price Predictions Criticized

Anderson has denied that the Government has used its purchase power to drive grain prices either up or down.

Wherry accused the President of "fanning the flames for higher prices" by "frantically predicting almost every day that prices were going higher and higher."

"Is it any wonder that Ed Pauley and even the President's own physician hopped into the commodity markets to reap a golden harvest?" he asked. He added that instead of "forthrightly" removing Pauley and Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham, White House physician, from their "listening posts," the President "blandly ignored the indignation of the people and let them continue."

Wherry called the fuel oil shortage a "national scandal" which he said his committee had warned against as long ago as last June.

Martin 'Not Interested' In Vice Presidency

Des Moines, Feb. 9 (AP).—House Speaker Joseph W. Martin, jr., (R., Mass.) told a news conference today that he was "not interested in the Vice Presidential nomination and not much interested in the Presidential nomination either."

Martin said, however, "no man in political life could turn down the Presidential nomination."

He declared he was not a candidate for either office.

In an address before a Lincoln Day GOP rally Martin called for "a superdefense in the air" to meet any emergency.

"We must have the most modern and the most scientific defense ever devised by man," Martin told Iowa Republicans.

"Such a defense is going to be superexpensive," he added.

Martin's remarks about defense climaxed a primarily agricultural speech in which he observed that "farmers are now making money" and he said he was glad of it.

Strife in Homeland Subdues Chinatown on New Year's Eve

The Washington Post

CELEBRATION HERE—Left to right, Frank Fong, secretary; Lee Toy, and Grant Seto, copresidents of the On Leong Chinese Merchants Association, mark the eve of The Year of the Dog, the ancient Chinese calendar's designation of New Year

Washington's Chinatown, H st., between 5th and 7th sts. nw., was subdued last night on the eve of the Year of the Dog.

It was New Year's eve by the ancient and celestial Chinese calendar, but the Chinese colony found little to celebrate with the homeland beset by strife.

"We can feel only sorrow when we think of our people in China," Grant Seto, co-president of the On Leong Chinese Merchants Association explained last night at the group's headquarters, 620 H st. nw. "We must dedicate ourselves to giving help our brothers."

More than 200 Chinese merchants gathered at the On Leoug Building to feast and pray, to do homage to their ancestors, and to bespeak peace and prosperity in the new year.

On the second floor great tables were spread with Cantonese dishes, and the air was heavy with burning incense.

As the merchants feasted, an orchestra sing-songed ceremonial music on primitive bamboo instruments.

A similar observance was held by the other local tong, the Hip Sings, in their less pretentious offices at 507 H st. nw.

Everywhere the greeting was "Kung hsia fa tsai"—good health and prosperity. But no one seemed quite sure of what year it wa sthe eve according to any of the various Chinese calendars.

Some supposed today marks the year 4000-odd by the lunar calendar and others thought it to be 2000-odd, counting frmo the birth of Confucius.

Others agreed it would take Confucius himself to be certain.

Anyway, at midnight a few honorable firecrackers popped to mark what is the indisputable thirty-seventh year of the Chinese Republic.

President Seeks to Continue Controls Over Tin and Rice

President Truman yesterday asked Congress to continue controls over a few products, principally tin, quinine, rice and nitrogen fertilizer, to prevent "confusion both at home and abroad."

Powers to control these materials, principally imports, expire with the Second Decontrol Act on February 29.

In a message to Congress, Mr Truman said the powers are "essential to the protection of our domestic economy and the carrying out of our international responsibilities."

If they lapse, he warned, international arrangements under which we obtain our tin supply would be "disrupted"; our tin stockpiling program would be handicapped; and it would be impossible to carry out international allocations of fats and oils, rice and rice products and nitrogenous fertilizer.

Failure to meet the planned foreign allocations, he added, "would injure the economics of foreign countries and seriously hamper the attainment of United States foreign policy objectives."

Secretary of Commerce Harriman, in charge of tin controls, has already issued an order, to take effect February 29 if the powers are extended, limiting the use of tin in beer, motor oil and animal food cans.

Four Chlidren Perish

Moundsville, W. Va., Feb. 9 (AP). Four children, one of them a month-old baby, perished when fire swept the two-story home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Lucas today.

The parents and two other children—Ronald, 8, and Virginia, 2—escaped. Mrs. Lucas was in critical condition at Glendale Hospital with two broken arms, a broken leg, burns and lacerations. She jumped from a second floor window after dropping Virginia to the ground.

Palestine U. N. Unit to Ask Armed Forces for Partition

Lake Success, N. Y., Feb. 9 (U.P.). The United Nations Palestine Commission agreed today to ask the U. N. Security Council for "armed forces" to enforce partition of Palestine, it was disclosed tonight.

The commission wrote the request into a special report on security problems in the Holy Land. The report will be rushed to the Security Council as soon as it is completed.

Final decision will be up to the Security Council, the 11-member agency which has power to order economic or military sanctions.

The report was expected to ignore the question of where the troops could be obtained. Nobody has offered a good answer to that problem. Most nations look to the United States and Russia to furnish manpower. The United States is balking at any such prospect. Russia is remaining silent.

Sniper Hunt Blast Damages Synagogue

Jerusalem, Feb. 9 (AP).—British soldiers damaged a synagogue in the Jaffa-Tel Aviv border area today when they blew up an adjoining house suspected of being a snipers' nest.

"On searching the synagogue, four Sten guns, 11 magazines and four grenades were discovered underneath the rostrum," an officer said.

Scattered violence increased to 1103 the unofficial death count count since the United Nations voted for partition November 29. Three Arab and two Jewish slayings were reported.

Soviet Says U. S. Aided Hitler

Benito Mussolini June 21, 1941, saying he would attack Russia.

Materials Held Incomplete

The Soviet Information Bureau said today that as far back as the summer of 1946 the United States, Britain and France had agreed to publish material captured from German foreign office archives by America and Britain.

"Noteworthy in this connection is the fact that the published collection contains only the materials relating to the period 1939-41," the Soviet Information Bureau said.

"Materials relating to the preceding year and in particular to the Munich period have not been included and thus have been concealed from world public opinion.

"This action is certainly not accidental, but pursues aims which have nothing to do with the objective and honest treatment of historical truth.

"In order to justify in some way before world opinion the unilateral publication of this collection of unverified and arbitrarily picked-out records made by Hitlerite officials, the British and American press circulated an explanation according to which the Russians rejected the proposal of the west to publish jointly a full account of the Nazi diplomacy.

"The statement of Anglo-American circles does not conform to the facts. The real facts are that the Soviet Government refused to take part in preparing German archive materials if they were false."

There was no doubt, the statement said, that the publication was effected "not for history, but to present distorted pictures, to slander the Soviet Union and undermine its influence and reputation as a stanch fighter of democratic aims."

One should not lose sight of the efforts of "ruling circles in the United States," the statement said, "in the year in which there is an American presidential election."

The Russians said documents putting the situation as between the Soviet Union and Germany in the proper perspective would be published soon.

1933 Pact Recalled

The statement recalled the 1933 "pact of accord and cooperation" signed in Rome by Britain, France, Germany and Italy.

This pact meant renunciation of the policy of strengthening peace loving nations against aggressive states, the statement said, and "Great Britain and France dealt a blow to the cause of peace and security."

Then in 1934, the statement said, Britain and France helped Hitler take advantage of Poland's then anti-Russian policy and this resulted in the conclusion of a German-Polish pact, "the first serious breach in the edifice of collective security."

Germany then "openly took a series of steps" to reestablish her armed forces, under the noses of Britain and France, the statement said.

In order to "confuse the reader and at the same time to slander the Soviet government," the statement said, "an American journalist asserts that the Soviet government was opposed to collective security and that Maxim Litvinov was dismissed and replaced by Viacheslav Molotov in the post of foreign affairs because he had been pursuing a policy of consolidating collective security."

"It is clear," the statement continued, "that Litvinov did not pursue any policy of his own but the policy of the Soviet government.

"On the other hand, everybody knows what a struggle for collective security was waged by the Soviet government and its representatives including Litvinov, throughout the prewar period.

"As regards the appointment of Molotov to the post of Foreign Affairs, it is quite clear that in a complex situation when Fascist aggressors were preparing the Second World War, when Great Britain and France aided by the United States were plainly abetting the aggressors and spurring them on to start the war against the Soviet Union, it was necessary to have in such a responsible post as that of Foreign Commissar a political leader with greater experience and greater popularity in the country than Litvinov.

Stalin Takes Molotov Post

(Molotov succeeded Litvinov as foreign minister May 4, 1939, at a time when it became apparent that war was nearing. Similarly, Josef Stalin took over the prime ministry from Molotov May 6, 1941, when it was apparent that Germany was about to attack Russia.)

"The historical truth, as can be seen from all this, consists in that Hitlerite aggression became possible firstly, because the United States helped Germany to establish within a short period of time a war-economic base for German aggression, and thus provided this aggression with arms, and secondly because the traducing of collective security disorganized the ranks of the peace loving countries, disrupted the united front of these countries against aggression, paved the road for German aggression and helped Hitler to unleash the Second World War."

Intervention to Wreck U. N., Arab Official Says

Cairo, Egypt, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—The secretary general of the Arab League said today armed intervention in Palestine will expose the United Nations to "calamity" and destroy it as a moral and peaceful force in the world.

Abdul Rahman Azzam Bey, league secretary, answered Senator Owen Brewster's (R., Me.) call for intervention by force by denouncing United States "Senators and politicians" who high-pressured U. N. members into supporting partition.

These "Senators and politicians" have asked the U. N. to become an "instrument of violence," to get involved in a civil war which may last for years, Azzam asserted. He also blamed election year propaganda.

At the same time, well-informed sources said the seven-state Arab League had decided to delay a full-scale invasion of Palestine until the British withdraw.

The league's military and political committees were said to have recognized that the Arab army of liberation cannot invade the Holy Land as long as British troops remain in the country.

The plan under consideration provides for Arab fighters to occupy Paletsine towns and villages as the British pull out, it was said.

David Cohn to Speak

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 9 (AP).—David L. Cohn, author of books on social problems, will be guest speaker at the midshipmen's Wardroom Panel at the Naval Academy Wednesday night.

Police Report Man Admits Taking Car 2d Time in Anger

A man who police say told them he "got so mad" when they recovered the car he'd stolen that he stole it again was under indictment on three counts yesterday by a District grand jury.

He is Benjamin C. Hawkins, 23, 1427 3d st. nw., who is charged with stealing a 1937 Pontiac from a car lot at 101 New York ave. ne., on January 18, taking it home, and parking it there. The car was recovered by police January 20.

Hawkins told police, they said, that when he found they had taken it away, he "got so mad" he went back to the used car lot and stole it again. The car was recovered the second time on January 23 by Maryland State police near Waldorf. Hawkins was arrested there and returned to the District. The value of the car has been placed at $600. Hawkins was indicted on two charges of unauthorized use of a vehicle and one charge of grand larceny.

Flood of Cattle and Hogs Topples Prices

since October 17, 1946, two days after OPA ceilings were removed. On the first day after ceilings were lifted, prices jumped as much as $11 a hundredweight, only to drop back $4 to $7 the next day.

Total hog receipts at the 12 leading markets were 89,000 compared with 60,000 a week ago.

GRAIN: Wheat and corn closed 8 cents higher, the limit for corn. May corn closed at $2.21½ a bushel; May wheat at $2.57 1/4.

The recovery was generally attributed to new buying, some covering by short sellers, and forward purchasing by millers.

Reports from some country areas were that a near-panic resulted Saturday from the four-day break. After the short Saturday market session, country elevators refused to buy more grain, being unable to hedge their purchases in the future markets. The refusals upset many farmers, and, according to some observers, was partly responsible for the rush to unload livestock.

Opinion remained mixed on the probable meaning of last week's crash. Most economists withheld judgment, preferring to watch the trend for a few days. Chicago grain brokers generally expected prices to stabilize around current levels.

Barring a crop failure, they added, they do not expect them to return to former peaks.

INVESTIGATIONS: Secretary Anderson told newsmen that both Chairman Homer Ferguson (R., Mich.) of the Senate Appropriations Subcommittee investigating speculation, and Chairman Andresen of the House committee had quizzed him about a "supposed leak" of inside information that precipitated last week's break in grain prices.

Anderson emphatically denied statements attributed to him Sunday that there had been a leak in the plans of the Government to slow down grain purchases. He read excerpts from testimony before congressional committees where he and other Agriculture officials had publicly told of the Government plans weeks ago. He also read testimony as to improved prospects for grain in Australia, Argentina and Europe.

Anderson added that the Cabinet Food Committee last Friday, at his office, had "programmed" holding this year's goal for wheat exports to 450 million bushels until March 31. (President Truman's goal, announced last October, was 500 million bushels.) After March, Anderson said, the condition of the winter wheat crop would be such as to allow him to determine whether the goal could be increased to meet Mr. Truman's target.

To meet the 450 million bushels goal, he said, it will be necessary for the Government to buy about 75 million bushels of wheat more, and a "small quantity of oatmeal and cornmeal" to complete its plan to export 70 million bushels of coarse grains.

Chairman Andresen started the day off with a fiery statement.

"The crash in the commodities market," he said, "demonstrates how completely the Truman Administration has dominated and fixed the price of grains and other commodities since July, 1946."

The drop, he said, had cost wheat farmers more than 200 million dollars, and additional hundreds of millions were lost to owners of other commodities.

"While thousands of small speculators and traders lost their shirts in last week's debacle, speculators tuned to the pipeline of inside information were able to get out of the market without loss or to take a short position and make tremendous profits in a few days," he said.

Last night Anderson released a red-hot letter he had addressed to Senator Robert A. Taft (R., Ohio), attacking Taft's statement of Saturday that the Government was going to buy 50 million additional bushels of wheat for export in order to bolster the tumbling grain markets.

"I feel your statement was made for political reasons," he told Taft.

Anderson then went into detail about testimony he had given before Taft's Committee on the Economic Report several weeks ago, to show that there had been at no time any change in the Government's buying program.

"The grain export program has been constantly out in the open," he said, and then added: "Knowing what you did about our export program, I do not see how you could have deliberately taken my announcement of last week and put the interpretation on it that you did.

DISTILLERY RESTRICTIONS: The vote by the Joint Committee was 8 to 0; only nine of the 16 members being present. One, Representative Jesse Wolcott (R., Mich.) declined to vote on the ground that he is chairman of the House Banking Committee which will work on the actual legislation.

(The Joint Committee is an advisory committee only—it does not initiate legislation).

It was Wolcott's Banking Committee that last week unexpectedly pigeonholed a measure, previously passed unanimously by the Senate, to continue present restrictions on liquor making until February 29. Last night his office reported that individual members of the committee might seek to reconsider the action on the temporary measure.

The Joint Committee's report, in addition to leaving details of the law to the legislative committees, recommended that "the power of the President to limit exports of grain to other countries, including Canada, shall be subject at least to the same general degree of restriction as distilleries in the United States."

Chairman Taft said the committee's action was an indorsement "in principle" of President Truman's request for power to allocate grain to distillers.

MARGIN REQUIREMENTS: In his reply to the Chicago Board of Trade, Anderson referred to testimony last year by McClintock that margins should not be used to influence trading. McClintock, he said, had testified that margins "serve no other purpose than to guarantee sanctity of contracts."

Anderson further asserted that the present high margin requirements, instead of precipitating last week's break in the market, "undoubtedly tend to curb speculative short sellers at such times.

Fuel Oil Ban Is Postponed

Kennedy's office—restricted to bona fide hardship cases.

The first of 9,500,000 gallons of fuel oil for the Baltimore Washington area, committed in arrangements made by the Senate Small Business Committee, arrived yesterday.

However, instead of a 500,000-gallon emergency shipment originally slated for relief of dealers normally supplied by the Petrol Corp. here, only 259,000 will be furnished. This already has been delivered by tank-cars and distributed to 19 local dealers, Kennedy said.

More hope for this oil-starved area came hiwntwes area came with news that four shoips were in Baltimore Harbor yesterday loaded with 15 million gallons of oil. One tanker reportedly carries crude oil, which will take several days to refine.

In other fuel-front developments, yesterday, the House and Senate approved a three-year $30,000,000 program to produce synthetic fuel, gasoline and oil, from coal and oil shale. The bill will have to return to the Senate for agreement on a house amendment.

Representative Franck R. Havenner (D., Calif.), sought a far more ambitious fuel aid; he introduced a resolution calling for an Atomic Energy Commission report on the practicability of atomic energy plants to provide stand-by heating needs.

Congress meanwhile received a report that production of distillate fuel oil in January was nearly 24 per cent above a four-week period last year.

Romanian Reds Discard Coalition in Power Rush

Prague, Czechoslovakia, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Romanian Communists have opened a campaign for complete political power by discarding the present coalition bloc in favor of a "democratic people's front," Bucharest dispatches said today.

Consolidation of complete power in Romania and Bulgaria, where a similar move is afoot, would leave only Czechoslovakia, Poland and Hungary with any vestige of formal political opposition in eastern Europe.

The campaign in Romania began with the return of a delegation which went to Moscow to negotiate a Russo-Romanian mutual defense treaty.

A diplomatic source here said the Romanian Communists had discussed setting up three nominal parties—representing the workers, the peasants and the middle class—which might form a new political "front." The informant emphasized, however, that actually the new regime would function as one single party.

Indians Slay 1900 Moslems In Kashmir

New Delhi, Feb. 9 (AP).—The Indian army killed 1900 Moslem attackers Friday in the biggest battle of the Kashmir campaign, a communique said tonight. More than 2000 were reported wounded. Some 14,000 Moslems attacked near Naoshera, 70 miles southwest of Srinagar, capital of Kashmir state. Indian casualties included 29 killed and 91 wounded, the bulletin said.

The Indian forces were commanded by a Moslem, Brig. Muhammad Usman.

The communique said also Indian troops killed 300 Moslem tribesmen at Poonch, 30 miles southwest of Srinagar. Indian casualties were given as 9 killed, 22 wounded.

The Naoshera assault was launched in daylight with heavy automatic weapons. At night fierce hand-to-hand fighting occurred. Many munitions were captured and Indian troops were last reported shelling enemy positions and drawing machine gun and mortar fire in reply.

Ashes of Gandhi To Be Strewn on Rivers

New Delhi, Feb. 9.—It was announced tonight Mohandas Gandhi's ashes will be strewn on the Ganges and Jumna rivers, sacred to the Hindu faith, Thursday at Allahabad. Gandhi was assassinated in New Delhi January 30 and his body cremated.

A thousand Indian troops and mounted police will march in front of an army trailer bearing the ashes to the point of immersion. Among the marchers will be barefooted poets chanting from the holy scriptures.

Dispatches from Madras and Bombay said police were raiding headquarters of the Moslem League national guard and its rival organization, the Khaksars. Both groups were outlawed yesterday as contributing to communal unrest.

Former District Bank Teller Indicted for Embezzlement

A former Washington bank teller was indicted by the grand jury yesterday on six counts of embezzling more than $4200 from the bank and on a charge of forging a $1500 check with the name of a local investment company official.

The embezzlements allegedly took place in February, 1947, when the defendant, Robert Daniel Matthews, 22, who then lived at 1856 Kalorama rd. nw., was employed at the Industrial Bank of Washington, 11th and U sts. nw.

Matthews was arrested on the charges in Chicago last month. He is being held there under $7000 bond after pleading guilty and asking to be tried in that jurisdiction.

The grand jury also indicated James B. Gordon, 53, of 828 5th st. ne., on charges of theft of Federal government property and conspiracy.

A Government electrician, Gordon is accused of stealing five calculators and two adding machines from the U. S. Coast Guard building while working there from February through September of last year.

Eddie Lee Davis, 31, of 811 3d 3st. nw., was indicted on a charge of manslaughter in the death of Charles W. Brown, 30, of 1213 6th st. nw., who was found dead of head injuries in a front yard at 27H st. nw., January 17. Police said Brown's head had been bashed in with a cobblestone.

Two 18-year-old youths, Lloyd C. Stewart, of 125 16th st. se., and Lawrence C. Howard, of 1008 26th st. nw., were indicted on charges of housebreaking and larceny in connection with the theft of more than $3400 worth of jewelry from Cramer, Inc., 2150 Wisconsin ave. nw., January 9.

Japan's Cabinet Votes to Quit, Opening Way for Coalition

Tokyo, Feb. 9 (NYHT.).—The cabinet of Tetsu Katayama, Japan's first Christian and Sosialist premier, yesterday voted "unofficially" to resign today, subject to the approval of General Douglas MacArthur and Emperor Hirohito. The resignation left the way open for formation of a more conservative coalition government at a moment when American policy is swinging toward greater aid to Japanese ecenomic recovery.

Ultra-conservative Shigeru Yoshida, briefly premier in 1946, and middle-roader Hitoshi Ashida, director of the Gunze Silk Corporation and "the Nippon Times," were mentioned prominently to head the nevt government, with Ashida having the better chance.

Katayama called on General MacArthur tonight and later hinted he might not quit.

"Japanese public opinion demands that you resign," said one reporter.

"In times like these we cannot pay any attention to public opinion," Katayama said.

He looked very unhappy. He said MacArthur's headquarters would issue a statement later.

At about the same time, General MacArthur isued a statement, saying that "Mr. Katayama and his cabinet have given the country conscientious and patriotic leadership and I have every confidence that the new government which emerges through democratic processes ahead will be guided by no less high principles."

CIO Election Activity Probe Due to Provide Test Case

By Alfred Friendly
Post Reporter

A Federal grand jury yesterday heard testimony on whether the CIO violated the political activity section of the Taft-Hartley Act, when it endorsed a candidate for Congress.

An indictment is expected to issue, possibly tomorrow. It is requested by the Department of Justice, and is not particularly resisted by the CIO itself. Both sides are anxious for a court test of the constitutionality of that part of the new labor law.

The act forbids a labor organization to make any contribution with respect to an election for Congress. In a deliberate, test-seeking, violation, the CIO News last July gave a front-page indorsement to Representative Edward A. Garmatz (D., Md.), then seeking office in a special Baltimore election.

Two Justice Department lawyers, Jesse Climenko and Turner Smith, presented the Government's case. The first witness was an FBO agent, who investigated the circumstances of the CIO's published indorsements of Garmatz. Other witnesses were Allan L. Swim, auditor, and Michael E. Bauer, business manager of the CIO News; Henry C. Fleisher, assistant director of CIO publicity, and R. J. Thomas, assistant to the CIO director of organization.

The indictment is expected to charge Phillip Murray, CIO president, and James B. Carey, secretary-treasurer, with violation of the law. The case, the first to test this provision, will probably go up to the Supreme Court.

It is believed that the Justice Department will go on to obtain other indictments in similar test" voilations, one of them involving AML political activity in Conpecticut.

Dog Is Rescued From Ice Floe

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MAROONED on ice off Brooklyn in Gravesend Bay, N. Y., a dog is rescued by Fred Landa and his friends, Jack West and Nathan Levy, after a police launch, a fire truck with an extension ladder, and a Coast Guard icebreaker were unsuccessful in a six-hour effort to rescue the animal

Cut in Meat Prices Expected To Reach District by Weekend

Falling prices on the Nation's livestock exchanges will bring relief to local housewives' pocketbooks this weekend or early next weekend—if the market does not rebound.

Meat industry officials here declared last night that while lower prices are likely, the sharply dropping market might turn upward again before it could affect local costs.

"But right now it looks like lower prices next week for sure, and maybe before then," said Sidney Kolker, chairman of the Merchants and Manufacturers Association's wholesale meat division.

Meat now on hand, he said, will continue to sell at current prices. There is normally a lag of five days or more between local prices and prices on Western livestock exchanges.

Price cuts in a few commodities were reported in chain stores here yesterday, but there was no definite indication they reflected last week's declines on the grain market.

As forecast Saturday, most chains reduced flour prices yesterday, in some cases a much as 16 cents on a 10-pound bag. One chain was down to 85 cents for 10 pounds of flour, and dropped ham and bacon prices on certain grades 8 to 10 cents under last week's listings. At least three chains cut lard prices—from 29 to 25 cents.

In Philadelphia the vice president of American Stores Co., William H. Eden, said that "if wholesale markets continue to drop, there will be price reductions all along the line from soap to syrup."

Trend Still Uncertain

That view was similarly expressed by a local chain store spokesman, "We'll cut prices as fast as we can, because of the competitive angle—but nobody knows yet just where prices are going."

Locally, there was no indication of lower bread prices. One bakery official stated that normally bread prices are weeks, or even months removed from flour prices.

Butter, which has been fluctuating widely on the New York Mercantile Exchange for several months, yesterday dropped from Friday's quotation of 92 cents a pound for 93 score butter to 88¾ cents. This compares with 86 cents a pound January 12.

Red Cross Gifts To Be Announced

Results of advance solicitation for "big gifts" in the 1948 Red Cross fund campaign will be announced today.

The initial report meeting of the special gifts division will be held at 12:30 p. m. in the Chamber of Commerce Building. Robert Woods Bliss, former Ambassador to Argentina and chairman of the division, will preside.

The area-wide campaign for $1,080,000 opens March 1.

Arkansas Court Again Voids 1750 Divorces

Little Rock, Feb. 9 (AP).—A decision invalidating 1750 divorces was made final by the Arkansas Supreme Court today.

The high tribunal refused, 4 to 3, a petition for rehearing on its January 12 ruling which held unconstitutional a 1947 act of the Arkansas Legislature creating a domestic relations division of Pulaski County (Little Rock) Chancery Court and appointing Mrs. Ruth Hale chancellor, who granted the divorces.

Road Toll House Torn Down Near Harper's Ferry

Harpers Ferry, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl.).—The little toll house on Route 40 west of here, relic of another age, has been torn down, the State Roads Commission announced today.

The four-room house was erected in 1866, and for many years travelers had to pay the keeper seven cents before he would lift the gate for them to pass. Not since 1900 had the fee been collected, and the house has recently been regarded as a traffic hazard.

The last of three gates in the area is still standing on the Halltown-Shepherdstown rd., near the Halltown paper mill.

Plea of 8 Groups to Intervene Delays Printers' Strike Case

Indianapolis, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—A Federal Court hearing on the Government's demand for an injunction against the striking AFL rpinters' union was delayed today while attorneys argued the right of eight labor and publisher groups to participate in the proceedings.

The arguments were given on behalf of eight groups who filed motions to intervene in the case of the National Labor Relations Board against the International Typographical Union. Judge Luther M. Swygert said he would rule tomorrow on the motions.

The NLRB seeks to enjoin the ITU from engaging in certain alleged unfair labor practices under the Taft-Hartley law. Some 1000 members of the union are on strike against 14 newspapers, 8 of them in the Chicago area.

Before the hearing opened today, NLRB General Counsel Robert N. Denham filed a brief supporting the injunction, charging that the union forced an illegal closed shop condition of employment upon the publishers and put the Taft-Hartley law in "imminent danger of complete frustration."

Withrop Johns, counsel for the NLRB, said none of the motions to intervene should be granted the labor and publisher groups.

"It would unduly multiply the number of participants in the case," he said.

Gerherd Van Arkel, counsel for the ITU, said that "only the parties who have been aggrieved" should be permitted to participate.

Gov. Tuck's Va. Tax Program Hurdles First Test in House

Richmond, Va., Feb. 9 (Spl).—Governor Tuck's taxx program today handily hurdled its first test, with House passage of five of six tax bills by overwhelming majorities.

Behind the legislative front, on another matteer, a delegation of eight Arlington organizations conferred here today with Richmond groups on mutual efforts to further nonpartisan elections of governing bodies.

The tax bills, which now go to the Senate, were maneuvered through the House of Delegates by Floor Leader E. Blackburn Moore of Berryville. Closest fight came when Administration forces beat down by a 50-42 vote a proposed amendment that would have repealed the 20 cents a hundred tax on bank deposits.

Following lengthy debate, amending attempts and expressions of sentiment for a sales tax, the House passed Administration tax measures to:

. Raise corporation income taxes from the present three per cent to five per cent, for an estimated additional annual revenue to the State of $4,694,410.

2. Boost personal and fiduciary income rates from 2 to 5 per cent, instead of the present 1½ to 3 per cent, estimated to yield an additional $4,075,106 a year.

3. Increase wholesale and retail merchants and restaurant license taxes to 20 per cent on a 100, from the present 13 cents, for $1,180,458 extra yearly.

4. Up recordation taxes on land deeds to 15 cents a 100 instead of the present 12 cents, for an added $234,844 annually.

5. Step up present State tax on beer of 1½ cents per 12-ounce bottle and $2.75 per barrel to 2 cents and $3.10, to net the State an estimated $1,785,096 more each year.

The sixth tax bill proposed by the Governor, to increase by one half of 1 per cent the gross receipts tax on public service corporations, was still in the hands of a subcommittee here today. Governor Tuck has estimated the increase would bring in some $1,863,311 at the rate of present business.

The House members also passed a bill adding Fairfax County to the list of those areas permitted to buy as much as 50 square acres of property for Government offices and institutions. R. M. Loughborough, county executive secretary, said the bill would permit county expansion of parks and community centers.

The Arlington delegation conferring here today with Richmond groups was headed by T. Oscar Smith, of the School Improvement Committee and the Columbia Pike Citizens Association. Arlington aid had been sought by leaders of Richmond's legislative attempts to secure a nonpartisan council provision of Richmond's city charter.

The call for Arlington's help was sent out, according to Harley M. Williams, of the Arlington Better Government League, after the Arlington Delegates evidenced opposition to the Richmond Charter bill. A bill to permit nonpartisan elections in Arlington has not yet been introduced, and leaders have said they are waiting to learn the fate of the Richmond measure.

With Smith here today were Harold L. Schilz, Arlington Civic Federation and New Arlington Citizens Association; H. H. Howe, Courtland Citizens Association; Mrs. Paul Reiber, Arlington Chapter, American Association of University Women; James D. Franklin, Better Government League; Mrs. Joseph J. Accardo, Young Democratic Club, and Mrs. Sarah Eigen, Organized Women Voters.

Bar Group Delays Court Division Vote

The Arlington Bar Association yesterday deferred until Thursday action on a proposal to recommend legislation to separate the county's juvenile and domestic relations court from the police court.

After a special meeting in the Circuit Court, the bar group agreed to adjourn to permit additional study of the proposal. Thursday's meeting has been set for 1:30 p. m., also in the Circuit Court.

The decision to delay action came after a special committee, appointed to study the recommendation proposal, brought in a report indorsing a dual court system. Former State Senator William D. Medley, chairman, said his group favored the legislation because it feels the juvenile court needs a separate judge who would devote all his time to matters in which he eventually would become a "specialist."

Judge Hugh Reid, who now heads the combined courts, told the group the volume of business has increased in both courts to the extent that separate judges would beadvisable. Judge Reid, long an advocate of separate courts, first asked the group to initiate action in a letter written several weeks ago.

Although the tw odepartments are under a single head, criminal cases are now tried in open court, while juvenile and domestic relations trials are held behind closed doors.

If the association approves the proposal, a resolution will be drawn up asking the county's legislative delegation to push the necessary legislation in the Virginia General Assembly.

What To Do For That Sluggish, Down-and-Out Feeling

Remember the time when you could eat like a horse, bubbled-over with energy, felt happy as a lark? Was it not because you liked to eat—didn't know what indigestion was, felt strong as an ox? As age advances the "old stomach and the ever-changing blood" need help. Now you may again release vibrant energy to every muscle, fibre, cell.

Every day—every hour—millions of tiny red-blood-cells must pour forth from the marrow of your bones to replace those that are worn-out. A low blood count may affect you in several ways: no appetite, underweight, no energy, a run-down condition, lack of resistance to infection and disease.

To get real relief you must keep up your blood strength. Medical authorities, by analysis of the blood, have by positive proof shown that SSS Tonic is amazingly effective in building up low blood strength in non-organic nutritional anemia. This is due to the SSS Tonic formula, which contains special and potent activating ingredients.

Also, SSS Tonic helps you enjoy the food you eat by increasing the gastric digestive juice when it is non-organically too little or scanty—thus the stomach will have little cause to get balky with gas, bloat and give off that sour food taste.

Don't wait! Energize your body with rich, red-blood. Start on SSS Tonic now. As vigorous blood surges throughout your whole body, greater freshness and strength should make you eat better, sleep better, feel better, work better, play better, have a healthy color glow in your skin—firm flesh fill out hollow places. Millions of bottles sold. Get a bottle from your drug store. SSS Tonic helps Build Sturdy Health.

"I see you've added ESSO to your company name, Charlie. How come?"

"Well...you know, ESSO Dealers are independent business men. But we're mighty pleased with the new name, just the same!"

"You see . . . even though this is my own business, and I can sell anybody's gasoline and oil I want to . . . the fact is I did choose ESSO products. I believe they give the best all-'round values to you and all my customers. And I've built a nice business here on that belief.

"Year after year, I've seen the ESSO name given to more and more fine products for use in cars and planes, homes and factories, on farms and in ships. Year after year, under this oval ESSO sign, I've seen first-hand evidence of the real outstanding satisfaction to the buyer that the ESSO name stands for.

"So when the company added ESSO to its official name, it's really you and thousands of other customers who caused the change. Pollikoff's Violin Solo Scores Hit

By Donald Engle

With Constitution Hall strangely silent yesterday afternoon, the day's concert activities were highlighted with a scintillating violin recital at the National Gallery by Max Pollikoff, with Joseph Adler at the piano.

Incidentally, Mr. Adler accepted the assignment on one day's notice, but the ease and certainty with which he handled the accompaniments, and his sympathetic response to the soloist, let one forget completely that a last minute change had been made.

In spite of Pollikoff's free-wheeling facility, there were moments, especially in the Glazounoff A Minor Concerto and the Hindemith Sonata for violin alone, when the texture of the score was obscured by a tendency to hurry, with the smooth, shining finish glossing over the notes. On the whole, it was a highly satisfying evening, ranging from lingering moments of glowing beauty and perfectly turned phrases, to the breath-taking pace in the Hindemith sonata.

Mr. Pollikoff gave a first performance of two of his own compositions, a clever hill-billy ditty called The Country Fiddler Dreams, and a restrained and moving Nocturne.

Young Artists Appear At Phillips Gallery

At the Phillips Gallery yesterday afternoon, it was a different story, when Louise Behrend, violinist, and Howard Barr, pianist, essayed a program that was nearly beyond them both.

It is always painful when young artists try to tackle a program that is more demanding technically and musically than they can master, for in the long run it is usually time ill spent. In this case, both the Mozart Concerto in E Flat, and the Ysaye Sonata for violin solo, could have been replaced with less taxing works to good advantage.

Miss Behrend seems to approach everything with an intensity that knows no peace, as though she were afraid to relax to let a lovely melody sing its way along. Her fiery and tempestuous reading was not out of place in the fast movements of Handel's Sonata in D major, the second part of the Ysaye Sonata, and the closing Brahms Hungarian Dances, but she completely missed the exquisite tonal imagery of the White Peacock, by Griffes, and the lovely lyricism of the Mozart slow movement.

Much of the harsh, unpleasant tone from her violin was undoubtedly the fault of the instrument itself, but it was not responsible for the difficulties with intonation. Mr. Barr's heavy-handed assistance in the Handel and Mozart works didn't help matters any, although his accomplishments in the final group of short pieces were in better balance.

Annapolis Anchorage Curbs Favored by Army Engineer

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 9 (AP).—Restructions proposed by the Navy on anchoring small boats in Annapolis harbor won tentative approval today of Lieut. Co. J. P. Campbell, of the Army Engineers.

Colonel Campbell said, however, he wanted to learn any objections of the city of Annapolis before making recommendations.

A hearing on the restrictions brought out a large crowd of yachtsmen at the Annapolis Yacht Club today.

The restrictions, applying to five areas, forbid anchoring except in emergency and make no restrictions on navigation.

The original request for the restructions was supplemented today by the offer of a 100-yard area southwest of the Navy's small boat anchorage for civilian use.

At the suggestion of Gilbert H. Moore, executive secretary of the Commercial Watermen's Association, rights of crabbers and oystermen will be protected in the regulations.

The Tidewater Fisheries Department also asked to retain its jurisdiction over six oysted bars in the restricted areas.

Historians' Plight

Dr. Henry F. Pringle, at a meeting of historians in Philadelphia, observed that one of the great difficulties confronting anyone who may attempt to write about the history of our epoch is the staggering mass of documentation and the worthlessness of most of it. The historian cannot even be sure that this mass contains the documents that he needs. Dr. Pringle took note of the habit among public men of suppressing or impounding important documents on grounds of "security." The worst of it is that the historian has thus no longer any way of determining whether or not the many mysterious aspects of recent history can be cleared up by further research.

Dr. Pringle's observations serve as a commentary to the annual report of Mr. Solon J. Buck, the National Archivist, concerning the present status of the Roosevelt library at Hyde Park. Mr. Buck points out that after Mr. Roosevelt's death his executors removed all his personal papers from the White House to the National Archives and later to Hyde Park, "with the exception of the so-called map-room papers, which for security reasons were kept under protective custody (sic!) of President Truman." Subsequently, however, the executors sought to obtain a legal sanction for this transfer. The Surrogate's Court of Dutchess County, N. Y., which had been petitioned for an opinion on the subject, answered ambiguously by saying that Mr. Roosevelt had made "a valid and effective gift of his papers" to the Government, but it did not clarify the question of whether Mr. Roosevelt had a clear title to all the papers removed to the library. And, of course, it does nothing to clarify the question whether historians have the right to demand access to the papers. Mr. Buck says that when the bulk of the Roosevelt papers have been analyzed and arranged, access to them will be governed by the "national interest, the security of the United States, standards of propriety, and special conditions imposed by donors."

The justice of such restrictions depends of course upon the interpretation placed upon the words. It is hard to see how "security" or "national interest" could be endangered by the publication of correspondence which is now from 4 to 15 years old, but it is easy enough to surmise how it could be endangered by the continued suppression of important historical facts. As for "propriety," no one would object to the segregation of purely personal papers which have nothing to do with matters of state. But how are we to be sure that the distinction between what is of legitimate interest to historical scholars and what would be of interest only to biographers will be drawn on the basis of "propriety," and not in the service of "the Roosevelt legend"? Meanwhile historians concerned with the secret diplomatic gambits which preceded the Second World War are confronted by certain puzzles on which the Roosevelt papers, among others, could certainly shed much light.

Irish Elections

The chief political consequence of the elections in Eire is the curbing of the almost plenary power that Mr. De Valera has enjoyed for so many years. As long as he commanded an absolute majority of the Dail Eireann, there was little that opponents of his policies or measures could do save voice their protests in debate. But now, as the result of the heavy losses sustained by his party (Fianna Fail) after last week's balloting, Mr. De Valera is faced with the choice of losing the Prime Ministry or of heading a government by coalition.

The question which arises in the latter event is among which of the other parties Mr. De Valera will seek the votes necessary to form the coalition. The party next in strength to the Fianna Fail is the Fine Gael, whose present leader is General Richard Mulcahy. The Fine Gael is descended from that section of the revolutionary movement which accepted the peace treaty of 1922 with Great Britain and undertook the organization of the Irish Free State. It now draws its strength chiefly from the more prosperous and conservative elements, but its domestic policies do not differ very markedly from Mr. De Valera's. Indeed, it has been said that Mr. De Valera has merely adopted and developed the policies initiated by the Cosgrove government.

At the opposite extreme to the Fine Gael is the new Clann Na Poblachta, the party of Mr. MacBride. Its showing in the elections disappointed most of the forecasts, but there can be little doubt that it was Mr. MacBride's appeal to the more radical and discontented elements of Fianna Fail that deprived Mr. De Valera of his majority. There remain the two Labor parties, the Clann nach Talmhan, or agrarian party, and a dozen or so independents. It is now reported that Mr. De Valera is counting upon the support of the National Labor Party and about a third of the independent votes. This will give him only a precarious majority, but it is the course by which he can retain the maximum of power for himself and his party.

Because of the complicated system of proportional representation whereby the members of the Dail Eireann are chosen, the deeper social import of the elections is not easy to discern. Under such a system the issues cannot be as sharply drawn as under a two-party system such as ours or Great Britain's. The most impressive feature of the returns was the showing of the Labor Party, whose program resembles that of its British namesake. The Labor Party has almost doubled its representation. This undoubtedly reflects the discontent of the urban working classes with the high prices which are supposed to have resulted in part from Mr. De Valera's tariff policies in the interest of agriculture and industry. But it also reflects an increase of the urban proletariat itself, partly as the result of the steady industrialization of the country, partly as the result of increased prices of land. In short, it is an indication that at last sociological evolution in Ireland is beginning to follow the patterns established elsewhere in Europe and that economic rather than nationalistic or religious preoccupations are beginning to provide the dynamic of Irish politics.

Voice Of The People

Supporters of the Auchincloss-Ball home-rule bill had a field day at the hearing on Monday. We suspect that one reason for the outpouring of favorable testimony was the unreasonable extremism in which opponents had indulged during the earlier sessions. Denunciation of home rule because the District has an inequitable tax and beeause home rule is not also national representation seems to have aroused the fighting blood of many local residents. We are delighted that they are making their voices heard.

Witness after witness at yesterday's hearing pleaded for the bill for the sound American reason that it would restore to disfranchised Washingtonians the right to vote. In doing so, they placed their demands on the strongest possible basis. It is primarily the denial of any participation of the people in the present system that makes it intolerable. If Congress as a whole really buckles down to a candid consideration of this issue, as the joint House-Senate Committee appears to have done, we do not think the outcome can be other than favorable.

It is especially noteworthy that a group of more than 50 young lawyers, businessmen and Government employes have organized themselves for the special purpose of promoting enactment of the home rule bill. Charles C. Glover 3d and Samuel Spencer spoke effectively for this committee. Chairman Auchincloss clearly indicated that the enthusiasm and careful work of the group in exploring the home-rule issue had made a favorable impression. The community was well represented by other spokesmen. Frank R. Jelleff, Washington merchant, brought in a hearty indorsement that stood out in emphatic contrast to the wobbly position taken by the Board of Trade. He found the bill "an excellent plan and one that all the people of the District should get behind." Elmer Davis, radio commentator, and Dr. Paul Douglass, president of American University, were also in the parade of citizens who put in their bids for Americanization of the Nation's Capital.

These constructive and positive indorsements of the home-rule bill do credit to the District's disfranchised citizenry. They seem to us to sweep into the discard the timorous advice of the don't-do-it-yet boys and the perfectionists who want nothing to do with suffrage unless they get everything they ask for. We think Congress will make no mistake if it regards this healthy clamor for a sound home-rule plan as ample evidence that the District will be able to manage its own affairs creditably if it is given a chance.

Wheat Goals

The International Wheat Council currently meeting in Washington is attempting to rationalize a compromise between world wheat prices fueled by scarcity and the collapse that may accompany possible future surpluses. Representatives of 38 nations have gathered under the sponsorship of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization to consider an international wheat agreement intended to stabilize prices by guaranteeing supplies to needy nations and markets to wheat producers. The general aim is a minimum price of $1.20 a bushel and a maximum of $2 in four- or five-year commitments.

The task the council has cut out for itself is not easy. Indeed, two previous attempts to reach agreement have failed. Numerous practical difficulties still plague the efforts. Some of the most important concern primarily the United States. By what means, for instance, can this country guarantee to make export wheat available at a maximum of $2 a bushel when market prices still are far above that figure? Obviously some sort of export subsidy would be required. And there is no assurance that Congress would approve the machinery necessary to carry out such an agreement once it were signed.

Moreover, what is the world price of wheat? Basically, we suppose, it now centers around the American market price. But foreign currencies are not freely convertible into dollars. In other words, to buy American wheat requires American dollars, agreement or no. The dollar exchange problem contributed to the trouble Canada experienced in guaranteeing wheat exports to Britain at under the market rate; Canada has had to revise the contract at a higher price. Also, previous experience with international quotas when demand exceeds supply has shown that there are always means of by-passing commitments. Then there is the problem posed by nonadherence of wheat-growing nations such as Russia. The effect of her exports on the world market cannot be determined. Argentina, an important wheat exporter, has declined to sign a wheat agreement unless it is accompanied by agreements on other commodities such as meat, coal, oil and machinery. With respect to the United States, that would mean virtually complete governmental control of exports.

To emphasize the difficulties inherent in a wheat agreement is not to deny the merit in stabilizing world supply and demand. Though it is still hard to envision any absolute world wheat surplus in terms of adequate diet everywhere, national surpluses are not out of the picture. Indeed, with new wheat crop conditions favorable in many areas including the United States, it is not impossible that spotty surpluses may arise within the next several years—though the wheat supply in the present season is still critical. Ideally, of course, these surpluses can be resolved by increased consumption in deficiency areas. In the last analysis; food surpluses are such only because of the inability of potential customers to buy them. Thus the aim of reconciling food supply with demand must necessarily be tied to general efforts to raise living standards. Attempts to stabilize one commodity are meaningless unless they also encompass measures to increase world productivity of other items that will provide the means to pay for imports.

Segregation

Michigan is free to apply its civil rights statute forbidding segregation, the Supreme Court has said in deciding the Bob-Lo Excursion Co. case, to foreign commerce involving a minimum of international interest. The case arose when employes on an excursion boat operating between Detroit and the Canadian island of Bois Blanc refused passage to a Negro girl. Michigan said they acted in violation of its civil rights law. The Supreme Court agreed that the Michigan law could be applied even though the boat was operating in foreign commerce. Its reasoning was that this particular "segment of foreign commerce can be said to have a special local interest." Traffic to the island is solely from Detroit for amusement purposes and it leads to no general intercourse between American and Canadian ports.

This decision seems to us entirely reasonable on the facts of the case. The court has long tolerated local regulations affecting interstate commerce if such regulations are not unduly burdensome and if Congress has not enacted conflicting legislation. Nevertheless, it seems to us that the case involves the court in a tangle of logic. A year and a half ago the court upset a Virginia statute requiring the segregation of white and Negro passengers on the ground that it was a burden to interstate commerce. Now it says that a Michigan statute applying a nonsegregation policy may be applied to foreign commerce, which is certainly as much protected against local regulations as is interstate commerce, because, as Justice Jackson put it in his dissent, that foreign commerce is only a little foreign.

We must bear in mind that the court has not upheld the Michigan statute because it applies nonsegregation; nor did it strike down the Virginia statute because it required segregation. Presumably both policies are permissible under the Constitution so far as a majority of the justices are concerned, although Justices Douglas and Black seem to hold a different view. What the court says is that local regulations looking one way are a burden to interstate commerce, while local regulations looking the other way are not a burden if applied to commerce that is foreign but not very foreign. This seems to us, as it did to Chief Justice Vinson and Mr. Justice Jackson, to leave the status of local laws affecting foreign or interstate commerce in a state of confusion. It gives added emphasis to President Truman's request of Congress to enact legislation forbidding discrimination along racial lines on interstate and foreign transportation facilities. Congress has unquestioned authority to establish such a policy. We doubt the wisdom of the Supreme Court attempting to effectuate such a policy by strained distinctions between the effects of differing State regulations on commerce.

LEGEND OF THE FIRE-BIRD

They say that once a flaming bird
Dropped from the sun-groves, in its beak
A glowing brand the earth-wind stirred
To a plume of fire, that it came to seek
A hiding-place, a secret portal,
To store in some elemental casket
The sparks of sun, that its immortal
Eggs be not in one golden basket . . .
The rocks were Sphinxes before its wings,
Shells were tarnished and cold with sea,
Earth was crowded with many things,
But it found heart-chamber in every tree,
And there in the living pith and bark
It left a twig of eternal light
To flower at need in the alien dark;
And here at my kindled hearth tonight
The groves of the sun blow red and gold
And sibilant music rises heard
As wings that arrow the dark and cold,—
The hovering wings of the Phoenix-bird.

Palestine Partition

Very rarely does one read an article or a letter in the American press against the partition of Palestine. And when one does appear, it is frequently given the same treatment a liberal comment gets that opposes some of our reactionary trends: the liberal commentator is called a Communist and the opponent of partition is denounced as an anti-Semite. That is why I was very pleased to read "Esperanto's" letter in The Washington Post of February 3.

On January 24, Rabbi Lazaron criticized the Zionists for their "fanaticism," saying that "they will have succeeded, for the first time in American life in giving the false impression that the Jews are a bloc whose interests are outside of and other than the interests of their fellow Americans." This brave rabbi, who has been so maligned by many of his fellow Jews, has put his finger on the crux of the matter, for it was just this Zionist movement that finally convinced Hitler that the Jews were a foreign body within the state, what we would call a fifth column these days (Mein Kampf, pp. 73-5).

The problem becomes more complicated when we consider, as did Mr. Kermit Roosevelt on the Town Meeting of the Air (October 28, 1947), that Mr. Shertok, who represented Palestine, was elected by millions of votes of persons who were citizens of other countries also. "I have been very concerned," said Mr. Roosevelt, "about this problem of dual citizenship and how a people who live outside a country are entitled to vote in its elections."

The only answer Mr. Shertok could give me was that we cannot apply ideas current in the life of "normal peoples" to the Jews; Mr. Max Lerner said that there was nothing more wrong with this than with Irish-Americans aiding in the liberation of Ireland. While Mr. Shertok's theory plays into the anti-Semite's hands in asserting that Jews are different and in demanding special treatment for them, Mr. Lerner's depends, for its appeal, upon ignorance.

The most important aspect of the whole Zionist movement is the issue raised by Rabbi Lazaron. And if we send American troops to implement the decision of the United Nations, a decision held by some as entirely without its jurisdiction, then what will be the ultimate effect of Zionism on Gentile-Jewish relations in the U. S.? What will be the reaction of American Gentiles when the first Gentile falls before Arab bullets while fighting for Zionism? Have our Zionists thought of this? It is time this issue is debated—before it is too late.

African Granary

While it is as yet in the discussion stage, the concept of a United States of Europe comes as a ray of sunlight in a dark and dreary world. There is an angle, however, which is not talked about but which this writer believes would provide an actual abundance of fresh air for stifled Europe. That is the possibility of Europe's pooling comparatively undeveloped African colonial resources for purposes of immigration.

France, for example, possesses in North Africa a great, rich, natural granary. This territory stretches 1200 miles along the Mediterranean and the Atlantic and was in ancient times the granary of the Roman Empire.

It will be argued that these African farm areas would have to be highly mechanized, probably at our expense. This is precisely the error in thinking which Mahatma Gandhi spent a lifetime trying to correct. Mr. Gandhi's thesis was that wars are a product of an impatient world tooled up beyond its moral intelligence. And that human beings should be content with simple methods until they grow up to the responsible use of heavy machinery. Keeping this wise counsel in mind, the beginnings of new African settlements could be accomplished at a relatively low cost.

Symphony Ultimatum

My hat off to Mr. Sperling for his timely stab at the National Symphony Orchestra, the board of directors and the conductor, in his letter of February 4.

I feel that the opinion of thousands of Washingtonians has been expressed in that letter. Let us accept the ultimatum. Let us get a new board of directors elected by the people. Let us get a new director.

I feel certain that the necessary money could be raised if the standard of the orchestra could be elevated by a democratic director. We should then have a symphony orchestra of which we could be proud instead of the present "training school for young musicians." L.

Outlawing Communism

The propositions being considered by many State governments aiming to outlaw communism and teachers that are or were Communists are imprudent. By such actions men witlessly cut themselves away from the liberty that supports them.

Practically speaking, we cannot rid the world of disease by outlawing study of it or contact with it. By the same token, if we are to get along with communism, or fight it, the better part of sagacity is to know more about it. Seeking to prevent Communists from teaching is as inept as seeking to prevent Christians from teaching because one segment of Christianity seeks to and does dominate the government of some nations.

Moreover, by such proposed new laws some want to strike out at one kind of indoctrination in the hope of making it easier to obtain state aid for their particular kind of indoctrination. Any indoctrination removed from us, or forced upon us by law, whether it be Christian morality or Communist expediency, is fatal to liberty. It is sufficient that government do no more nor less than make effective liberty's other essential, namely: wherever people contribute to a method of living and are subject to it, then that method must be subject to the voice of those who contribute. "Hidden Assets"

In your editorial "Hidden Assets" of February 5, you comment favorably on the decision of the National Council to reveal names of holders of frozen assets held in this country to governments of the Marshall Plan countries. This decision is unadvantageous from both the American and the European standpoint.

The decision of the National Advisory Council to reveal such names seems to have been taken with a view to appease some members of Congress, who demanded the mobilization of all "hidden assets" of citizens of the Marshall Plan countries, no matter whether free or blocked, in order to reduce the burden of the Marshall Plan on the American taxpayer.

According to reports the total amount to be mobilized will be in the neighborhood of 700 million dollars, This sum should not, however, be compared only with a corresponding cut in the Marshall Plan appropriation, but should also be weighed against the damage as a consequence of this action.

As Secretary of Treasury Snyder wrote to Senator Vandenberg, private bankers had urged that it was "fundamental to our free private enterprise system to respect private property, whether held by foreigners or not." Indeed it would be difficult to conceive a private enterprise system without proper protection of private property. The United States is right now making big efforts to convince the peoples of the world of the blessings of its free enterprise system. It would be most regrettable if this effort would have to suffer a serious setback through a move made simultaneously and even in conjunction with the Marshall Plan.

The measure itself—if applied only to Marshall Plan countries—may not be too dangerous for the foreign individuals whose names are to be revealed to their governments, because the governments of the Marshall Plan countries are not using totalitarian methods in persecuting violators of exchange laws. Nevertheless this decision sets the pattern for future similar actions and once the new principle is established it will be difficult not to apply it in the remaining areas also. Therefore the measure will create justified fear and mistrust in various other countries, especially Soviet-dominated regimes. These people will lose faith in the United States as a bastion of freedom and personal protection. This will happen at a time when it is most important to strengthen these peoples in their belief that there is a better world which offers all the human rights they are now being deprived of.

Reference has been made to repeated requests by various foreign governments to give them assistance in obtaining control of the holdings of their citizens who have concealed them. There can be no question of the right of the state to ask for the surrender of foreign holdings of citizens against local currency, if the economic situation requires the mobilization of foreign assets for the purpose of meeting an economic emergency. In my capacity of an officer of the central bank of a European country struggling with serious economic difficulties for almost two decades I myself fought persistently for this principle. When coming to this country on a diplomatic mission I considered it one of my most important duties to try to arrange for the mobilization of the frozen assets of citizens of my country in order to be able to use these holdings for economic reconstruction.

But the Marshall Plan countries will benefit little from the mobilization of the hidden funds now, because if these funds become available and improve their balance of payment, an equal cut in their share of ERP aid will offset the gain.

In eastern European countries the eventual application of the measure would mean that thousands of people would be exposed to the inhuman practices of totalitarian police systems.

The gains disclosing the names of holders of foreign frozen assets therefore would be the saving of 700 million dollars on the one hand, while on the other immeasurable harm would be done to the free enterprise system. The swift mobilization of foreign assets in this country would also result in the liquidation of funds which could play a very important role in the starting of a new era of free commercial and financial relations between the United States and European countries, once the present barriers can be abolished and their causes eliminated.

Washington Calling

By Marquis Childs

A Vandenberg Draft?

SENATOR Arthur H. Vandenberg sits in the ornate red-and-gold vice presidential room just off the Senate floor and ponders his own future and the future of the world. Both he finds filled with uncertainties, with high promise and at the same time with potential perils.

Looking out at the snow-covered lawn of the Capitol, he recalls the first sentence of his statement in Life magazine of nearly a year ago, when he said he was not a candidate for the Republican presidential nomination. It is harder not to run for Presiden', the Senator said then, than it is to run for that high office.

Everything that has happened since seems to prove the truth of the paradox. It was General Eisenhower's experience. If the general had been content simply to drift, saying nothing, the Eisenhower boom would certainly have continued to expand. Now that Eisenhower is out, the focus is again on Vandenberg in spite of his real reluctance and the deep doubts that trouble him. The draft-Vandenberg stimulus comes, as it did in the instance of Eisenhower, from those who feel that the times demand a man above and beyond the ordinary political mould.

In a deadlocked convention Vandenberg could be drafted. But he could be expected to lay down two conditions before he accepted such a draft. The Vandenberg terms would be:

1. That he would be a one-term President if he were elected.
2. That he make no barnstorming coast-to-coast campaign tour.

THE SENATOR believes a one-term declaration would put a candidate in a very strong position. He said as much four years ago when he came out for General MacArthur as the 1944 Republican standard bearer.

In the Senator's view, a one-term President would be freed from politics in making his major decision. He would not be constantly pressed by friends and cohorts reminding him of the effect that his actions were having on his chances for re-election. Furthermore, his appeal to the country would be stronger since it would be evident that continuing in power was not his chief objective.

There is also the practical fact of the Senator's age. On his birthday on the twenty-second of next month, Vandenberg will be 64 years old. He is less than two months older than President Truman, who will be 64 on May 8.

Rumors about the state of Vandenberg's health are a part of the current of political speculation. To friends who inquire on this score, he replies that he had a thorough physical examination at a clinic in his home town of Grand Rapids, Mich., last fall. The doctors at that time pronounced him organically sound. He has had a mild heart condition which has been brought under control by digitalis administered over a considerable period of time.

DURING the past two years the Senator has proved that he can carry a heavy burden of work. As chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee he conducted the five weeks of hearings on the Marshall Plan with patience and courtesy. If the rumored compromise comes off and the plan is speedily approved, no small share of the credit will go to Vandenberg.

Proud of his role in the Senate, the senior Senator from Michigan is acutely aware of the thorny path ahead of any President in the coming four years. World War II has left in its wake problems at home and abroad of such magnitude as to make even the most ambitious man hesitate. Increasingly the Presidency has become an "impossible" office, with the public and ceremonial side piled on top of a responsibility grown more crushing with each succeeding year.

Yet a full-fledged campaign to nominate Senator Vandenberg has begun in his own State. It was launched by Gov. Kim Sigler and Vandenberg's Michigan colleague, Senator Homer Ferguson. That gives it an official status. At a rally in Detroit, Republican leaders expressed confidence their favorite son would accept a draft if it came about.

Senator Vandenberg is still in the position of not running for President. He talks of the possibility of some sort of preconvention agreement between Senator Taft and Governor Dewey which would prevent a deadlock, lifting the threat of the kind of long-drawn-out hair-pulling that ruined the Democrats at their convention in Madison Square Garden in 1924. But the Senator is a politician and not a general. He could hardly rule out a draft as General Eisenhower did, even if he wanted to.

U. N. Police Force

I am delighted to learn that at least there is some serious thought directed toward the establishment of a United Nations police force.

It is nothing more than rank stupidity to expect the United Nations or any other world court to function effectively without an international police force to carry out its decisions.

With an international army, navy and air force in control of all munitions and armaments, working hand in hand with an international bureau of investigation, the world could be effectively patrolled and war would be a thing of the past.

The importance of an international language would then be realized, and the establishment of an international currency would come about as a matter of course.

Then our historians would have an opportunity to record the events of a constructive world rather than the destructive generations of the past with their disgraceful records of war after war. JOSIAH SHEPARD.

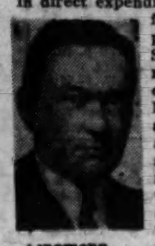
Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Costs Of Containment



Lippmann

PRESIDENT Truman's foreign policy is about to cost well over 20 billion dollars a year in direct expenditures. The bill for foreign aid put in by the State Department is well over eight billions figured on a yearly basis, and there is besides the bill for many other activities in foreign relations. The bill for the armed forces is over ten billions, not counting the additional expenditures for the proposed strategic Air Force or anything more than a first small installment for universal military training.

The disturbing thing about these costs is not the burden they impose this year. It is that they support a foreign policy in which, as it is now conducted, this rate of expenditure will increase rather than diminish.

THAT IS because we are operating a policy of global containment, rather than one designed to induce and compel a settlement.

For a policy of holding the line all over the world requires more and more money, more and more armaments, merely to hold the line as the situation behind the line we are holding deteriorates.

DURING THE past year it has been deteriorating in Germany, in Greece, in the whole Middle East, and in China. The deterioration is marked by the fact that as the Truman Administration has increased its commitments, its diplomatic influence on events has declined.

We have assumed the whole burden of the deficit of western Germany but our control over the destiny of Germany is rapidly evaporating. We have assumed the whole burden in Greece but the prospects of our being able to subdue the rebellion or to settle it are less favorable than when we rushed in a year ago.

The whole Middle East from Iran to Iraq to Palestine to Egypt is proving once more the old rule that when great powers intervene separately and competitively in a rich and backward region of the world, the result is anarchy and violence. And in China we are about to increase our commitments at a time when our capacity to influence the course of events is approaching zero.

THE COMMON factor in all those places is that, thanks to the Truman Doctrine, we are losing our freedom of action. Our clients are becoming our masters. The western Germans, the government party in Greece, the Iranian government, the Zionists, the Arab League, and General Chiang Kai-shek have been given such unqualified support so publicly that the Truman Administration is constrained to follow them and cannot lead them. Once we declared that it was a vital interest of the United States to make western Germany solvent as a bulwark against communism, or to make Greece prosperous as a bulwark against communism, or the Middle East, or China, we deprived ourselves of diplomatic bargaining power.

We must support our clients no matter what they do because we have slammed and bolted the door behind us. They know that we cannot withdraw our support without eating our words, and suffering humiliation and a spectacular loss of prestige.

THE POLICY of containment has thus become what it was bound to become — an ever deeper entanglement in ever more insoluble difficulties. There is only one way out of it and that is by concentrating our diplomatic effort upon a settlement at some critical point. That point may be Austria. It may be Greece. It could be the Middle East. But at some deliberately selected point the stalemate must be broken decisively by that combination of pressure and compromise which is the essence of diplomacy. The important thing is to break the stalemate somewhere, and thus to change the political currents of the world. An Austrian treaty, which resulted in the military evacuation of Austria, would do that. It might well mark the turn of the tide from another war to an eventual peace. Therefore it would be worth a considerable price.

What has to be determined by diplomatic negotiation is whether the Russians mean to stay in Austria or to leave it, in other words whether an Austrian peace treaty can be had for a price, whether Austria can be ransomed. If it can be, then the cost of the ransom will be small compared with the cost of not making peace, of maintaining the armies of occupation indefinitely, of never reaching the time when Austria is independent and no longer divided under alien rule.

THE WORST of the Truman foreign policy is that in order to justify the enormous and mounting costs, it has been necessary to argue ourselves into the assumption that nothing can be settled. From that it is a small step to the view that nothing ought to be settled since any settlement requires concessions and compromises,—and thus to acquire the habit of not looking for, of not trying to think out, ways and means of breaking the stalemate.

This habit is easy to acquire and hard to throw off. Especially as is now the case in the State Department, the habit tends to become fixed because the few men at the top who would have to direct a policy of settlement are so busy with the complicated consequences of the policy of containment that they cannot pay serious attention to the remedy for it.

Polish Independence

By Sumner Welles

Mr. Lane's Contribution

ARTHUR BLISS LANE'S book on his recent mission to Poland, published this week under the title I Saw Poland Betrayed, will undoubtedly provoke controversy. He will be attacked by the extreme left as a prejudiced reactionary. His report will be hailed by the more hysterical right as added proof that only the use of American military power can solve the world crisis.

But to those who believe that if our present foreign policy is to succeed the public must have the chance to understand the international problems which this country faces, Mr. Lane's book represents a major contribution to clear thinking.

The former Ambassador tells us in detail how the Communist-imposed Polish government blocked his efforts to protect American interests and to persuade the Poles that our disapproval of their government has not lessened our desire to help in their recovery. He explains how the Communist dictatorship prevented the establishment of the representative form of government promised the Polish people in the Yalta agreement.

That Mr. Lane failed in his objective was due to no lack of vision or of ability on his part. It was due to the continued subjection of Poland to Soviet military occupation, to the flagrant violation by the Kremlin of its pledges, and to the feeble and vacillating policy of the State Department during the incumbencies of Stettinius and Byrnes.

THERE IS REASON to disagree with Mr. Lane's estimate of the measure of President Roosevelt's responsibility for Poland's present status. Mr. Lane insists that Poland was "sold down the river at Tehran and Yalta."

The history of President Roosevelt's role in the Polish negotiations is long and complex. I took part in the earlier discussions, when that true patriot and statesman, General Sikorski, was Prime Minister. I can therefore state categorically that President Roosevelt, at that time, was convinced that there could be no lasting European peace unless the Polish people regained their untrammeled sovereignty, unless such fundamental mistakes as the Polish corridor were corrected, and unless the Poles obtained a more viable state, with a sovereign coast line and with the economic advantages needed to raise living standards.

But to him the chief essential was security. It was for that reason that he favored a line roughly similar to the Curzon line as Poland's eastern frontier. He believed that this would lessen the danger of future controversy with Russia, and that by giving the new Poland a completely homogeneous population it would eliminate the menace of minority disputes. He was equally determined that whatever sacrifices Poland might make in the east should be compensated by fair territorial adjustments in the west.

HE MAINTAINED those convictions in the Tehran and Yalta agreements.

These wartime pacts were concluded when Poland was occupied by alien armies and at a time when any breach between the Allies might have proved fatal. There is far more reason to criticize the failure of this Government to insist upon the enforcement of the provisions of these agreements than to complain that they ignored the just interests of the Polish people.

The Lane report helps to bring the issue of Poland into proper perspective. Poland and Czechoslovakia have become the chief keys to the future of central and eastern Europe. So long as the Soviet Union is able to use these two democracies in the heart of Europe as tools in its own expansion policy, there can be no healthy solution for the problems of Germany and of Austria, and little hope of breaking down the barriers between western and eastern Europe.

THE PICTURE that Mr. Lane gives us of present-day Poland is necessarily painted in dark colors. Yet the signs of an unquenchable national vitality are unmistakable.

By no means the least significant of these was to be seen during the annual congress of the Polish Socialist Party a month ago. When the Polish Peasant Party of Mikolajczyk was defrauded in the national elections of 1947, the Communists gave the Socialists a large share in the government. The Socialist Secretary-General, Mr. Cyrankiewicz, was even named Prime Minister. The Communists have since tried to force the Socialists to lose their identity in a Communist front. But at their congress the Socialists voted to continue as an independent party. They had the courage to announce that they would also cooperate with the Socialist Parties of western Europe.

It is true that Cyrankiewicz has recently with much fanfare made his obeisance to Stalin at Moscow. But it may be that the same "third force" that is shaping England, France and Italy will eventually become the means of restoring their liberties to the peoples of eastern Europe.

There is no European people that has suffered more tragic vicissitudes than the people of Poland. Slaughter, devastation and oppression, even their century-long obliteration as a sovereign nation, have never weakened their sense of national identity nor their patriotism. But the fate of Poland depends today as it has always depended in the past on the policies of the great powers. When the United States convinces the Soviet Union that the independence, the security and the prosperity of the Polish people are an unalterable objective of American policy, Poland will regain her freedom and become a potent instrument in the creation of a peaceful Europe.

3-Fold Boost In Warplane Output Asked

By John G. Norris
Post Reporter

Present "unsettled" world conditions require tripling the present production of military planes, President Truman was advised yesterday.

The Air Coordinating Committee—top level Government aviation policy group—declared in its annual report that at least 5780 warplanes should be built annually until peace is assured.

At the same time, Congress received a recommendation that the States should have a greater say in policy and administration of civil aviation.

Offer 14-Point Program

Representatives of the National Association of State Aviation Officials submitted a 14-point program for bolstering civil aviation to the Joint Congressional Air Policy Board.

It proposed that the States share with the Federal Civil Aeronautics Board authority to determine where airline routes should be placed. C. F. Cornish, president of the Association and director of aeronautics for Indiana, said that States want to participate in determination of route patterns but not in CAB decisions as to which airline should fly specific routes.

The group also proposed that States (1) have more authority in carrying out the seven-year billion-dollar Federal airport program; (2) be authorized to inforce civil air regulations, including right to revoke pilots' licenses; (3) investigate accidents involving non-scheduled transports and private planes, with several exceptions.

1945 Analysis Restudied

In its annual report, the Air Coordinating Committee declared that it had restudied a detailed analysis of war mobilization requirements made in 1945. The 1945 report declared that when world stability is assured, it will b enecessary to build 3000 war planes a year to maintain the aircraft industry in readiness to expand to an adequate war potential. Until then, an annual production of 5780 planes is necessary, it was reported.

"Strategic planning in relation to present world conditions appears to call for adherence to the upper rather than the lower level of production recommendation," the ACC said in its review of the 1945 report. It added:

"Both levels assumed that we would have at least one year's warning . . . It is no longer certain that our planning may assume (that) much."

Opposes Domestic Revival

The report also declared that the United States Government is opposed to revival of domestic airlines in Germany and Japan at this time. Whatever services are needed at this time should be provided by occupation forces or international airlines, it was said.

The National Association of State Aviation Officials recommended that the ACC establish a State and local panel to advise it, and that a national air policy council be set up to determine top? level policy in all fields of aviation. The latter should be composed of members of Congress, Federal and State air officials, declared the association.

Last Big Swing

Taft Starts 5-Day Tour Of 6 States

By the United Press

Senator Robert A. Taft of Ohio headed West last night on a six-State stumping tour which he hopes will bolster his chances of winning the Republican presidential nomination.

The trip—during the traditional Lincoln week lull in Congress—may be his last extended speaking jaunt before the Republican National Convention at Philadelphia next June. He expects to be kept busy in Washington for the balance of the congressional session.

The Senator was accompanied by his wife, Martha, who flicks telling political barbs, and she will address women in cities where "Bob" takes on the men.

Taft's crowded schedule calls for 10 speeches in five days, beginning with an appearance before the Inland Press Association at Chicago today at noon and a speech at Bloomington, Ill., tonight.

After stops Wednesday at Gary and Hammond, Ind., Taft will make his Lincoln Day speech at St. Paul, Minn., Thursday, in the home State of Harold E. Stassen, one of his rivals for the nomination.

The Ohioan will go to Omaha for a speech Friday and a brief talk at Council Bluffs, Iowa, across the Missouri.

His final talks will be made Saturday at Colorado Springs and Denver, Colo. He expects to be back in Washington February 17.

Truman Requests Billion in State Aid for Highways

President Truman asked Congress yesterday for one billion dollars to help the States rebuild and modernize highways which can't safely be neglected any longer.

The President said a two-year stopgap program should be confined to:

1. Roads so badly worn that they are safey hazards and cost too much to maintain.

2. Roads which fall "seriously" short of handling the traffic.

A long-term, extensive road-building program is needed, Mr. Truman said, because there are nearly 3,000,000 more vehicles on the road now than before the war. "By any reasonable standard our highways are inadequate for today's demands," he said.

But this long-term program must be postponed, he added, in a special message, lest it overtax the construction industry and add to the danger of inflation.

The President's Calling List

By The Associated Press

President Truman yesterday received the following callers:

11:30 a. m.—Edward J. Flynn, Democratic national committeeman from New York.

12:15 p.m.—Harold M. Stephens, Chief Justice, D. C. Court of Appeals, with Associate Justice Bennett Champ Clark.

12:30 p. m.—Treasury Secretary Snyder.

12:45 p. m.—Secretary of State Marshall.

1:00 p. m. Lunch.

3:30 p.m.—Radio Comedian Bob Hope.

Clark Blames Big Producers For Costly Movie Tickets

Attorney General Tom C. Clark yesterday blamed the high price of movie tickets on a conspiracy of big producers.

Clark told the Supreme Court the public intrest requires five of these companies to sell their theaters, as they were ordered to do in an antitrust case.

The Attorney General opened the hearing on an appeal from this order in the Supreme Court, which also will hear the case argued by such legal heavyweights as former Justice James F. Byrnes, John W. Davis, once Democratic candidate for President, and Thurman Arnold, former antitrust chief and justice of the United States Court of Appeals here.

First Case Since Leaving

This is the first case Byrnes has taken before the high court since he left its bench in 1942.

Bebore opening the movie hearing yesterday, the court handed down four split decisions and a handful of orders.

By a 6-to-3 vote, the justices ordered the Utah Supreme Court to give a new hearing to a group of Mormons who urge plural marriage. These people were found guilty of breaking a Utah law against conspirary to do anything against the public health or morals, or to trade, commerce, justice or administration of the law.

The majority thought this broad law might be against the Constitution and put the question up to the Utah courts. The dissenters were sure it was, and wanted to go ahead and say so yesterday.

Out of Court Hands

By a 5 to 4 vote, the justices declared the courts have nothing to say about the award of overseas air routes. These awards raise political issues, the majority thought, which must be settled by the President, on the basis all the data he has, some of which might be secret.

The dissenters said Congress provided for review of such awards in the courts.

By a 6 to 3 vote, the court held that Robert C. Johnson, a seaman, has a claim against the Government for being hurt when another seaman dropped a block on his head when he was on a Government tanker at Pearl Harbor in 1944. Johnson won $16,000 in damages, but a lower court set the award aside.

Given Escape Chance

By an 8 to 1 vote, the court gave Joseph F. Maggio, head of a bankrupt camera firm in New York, a chance to escape jail. When he held out goods on a referee in bankruptcy, Maggio was jailed for contempt. The Supreme court ordered the New York Federal court to decide whether Maggio could pay the money.

The court, in its orders, refused to hear the claim of former Federal judge William Clarm for $9375 back pay under the GI bill of rights.

The movie hearing will go on today and maybe tomorrow.

French-Spanish Border Reopened After Two Years

Hendaye, France (Tuesday), Feb. 10 (U.P.).—The border between France and Spain, closed in 1946 in protest against Spain's ties with Hitler's Germany, was officially reopened for travel at midnight last night.

It was reopened to provide transit revenue for the treasury, ore for heavy industry and food for limited French diets.

Dormant border towns and villages came back to life at once, but officials said it will be weeks before rail traffic reaches the pre-closing figure of 300 cars a day.

RAF Plane Crashes On London Bus, 2 Die

London, Feb. 9 (NYHT).—A twin-engine Royal Air Force plane crashed today onto the roof of an electric trolley bus in a crowded North London street, killing two fliers and injuring nine bus passengers.

The plane first struck a chimney, swerved and crashed into the bus which was taking on passengers outside a movie house.

It's Marshall's Habit

It's 'Blossom Time' At the National

By Richard L. Coe

MEN ABOUT TOWN: Franz Schubert came back to the National last night in the person of Everett Marshall, a disguise that has become a habit . . . The means, of course, is "Blossom Time," now in its twenty-seventh season under the banner of the non-c Shuberts, Lee and J. J. . . . The production is much as usual, with Marian Stevens as Schubert's partner for the melodic "Song of Love," Anthony Blair and the veteran comedy team of Harry K. Morton and Zella Russell . . . Zella, off stage, is Mrs. Morton and besides playing Mrs. Krantz in the current revival, also staged the piece . . . This, you may remember, is the year the Shuberts were NOT going to revive "Blossom Time," but, like all resolutions, that one went overboard . . . If the operetta is a habit with the producing brothers, it's also one with Marshall, who first played Schubert 10 years ago and has been going back to him periodically ever since for winter tours and open-air performances in summer theaters throughout the Nation . . . Marshall first earned his living in an engineering firm, but struck out for opera, making his debut in Sicily . . . He sang with the Metropolitan for five seasons, then switched to George White's "Scandals" and the Broadway musicals, thus reversing the career of the late Grace Moore . . . Now he's back in the square spectacles of Schubert, which, he says, is one of his three favorite roles . . . The others: Scarpia in "Tosca" and the elder Germont in "La Traviata."

"BLOSSOM TIME." The Messrs. Shubert present the operetta with book and lyrics by Dorothy Donnelly from the original of A. M. Willner and H. Reichert, music from the melodies of Franz Schubert and H. Berte adapted by Sigmund Romberg. Settings by Watson Barratt. Staged by Zella Russell. At the National.

HENRY FONDA—the screen's Henry Fonda, that is—is only 40 miles from the old Wardman Park stage, where he used to act before he hit Broadway, "The Farmer Takes a Wife" and Hollywood success . . . Fonda's in Baltimore this week, opening at Ford's tomorrow night in "Mister Roberts," Thomas Heggen's and Joshua Logan's adaptation of the Heggen novel . . . During its tryout weeks in Philly, scalpers were getting $25 a pair for seats and the Broadway crowd expects it'll be a hit . . . Via the "party-booking" system, the New York performance of April 21 already is sold out, so all augurs well for Fonda and "Mister Roberts" . . . Now the problem is to see if Ford's has any seats left . . . Note: Instead of a Monday night opening, the play opens tomorrow.

JERRY ROSS is a lean, wiry type, who went to Tech High and then on to G. W. . . . But he always wanted to dance . . . Now he's visiting his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam Rosey, 2939 28th st. nw., after dancing plenty . . . He went from the Navy into Vera Zorina's ill-fated "Dream With Music," Fritz Kreisler's similarly ill-fated "Rhapsody" and after a brief tour with Katharine Dunham, wound up in the Chicago company of "Call Me Mister" . . . This turned his luck and he stayed with the revue over a year, till its recent closing . . . Back home for a visit, though, he can't stay away from dancing and is joining his original teacher, Evelyn Davis, for a dance concert Friday night at Lisner Auditorium . . . Miss Davis and her Dance Playhouse Group are working hard for the one-performance program and vow that they'll prove the Lisner stage is a worthy ballet home . . . Jerry, like all other dancers, doesn't know what comes next, but you never know when another "Call Me Mister" will come along.

WALTER KERR of Catholic University's speech and drama staff will be making a talk Friday night at the Mayflower that probably will lure the Washington critics, whose usual job is criticizing his work. . . . He'll probably be alluding to some of theirs when he speaks on "The Future of the American Stage and Screen" for the Charles Carroll Forum at 8:15. . . . We're even planning to give up our favorite radio program to hear him . . . The program? . . . "It Pays to Be Ignorant," most sensible thing on the air.

BURL IVES, always a local favorite from the days he used to live here, will be autographing records of his ballads at Hecht's tomorrow afternoon at 2. . . . And he'll be singing them in the flesh that night at Constitution Hall.

FIREMEN around town shouldn't miss seeing "This Is America's" fine tribute to their work, "Smoke Eaters." This is the short at the Trans-Lux. (It played Keith's a recent week) and it certainly couldn't be a timelier subject for Washingtonians.

District's 8th Traffic Death Is Recorded

Washington's eighth traffic death of the year was recorded yesterday following an autopsy in the death of Charles W. King, 72, of 2913 7th st. se.

King was found unconscious in his home Sunday night. Dr. Edward A. Palank, pronounced him dead and the autopsy report yesterday declared him a traffic death.

The accident in which King was injured occurred November 27, 1947, in front of 2916 Nichols ave. se. King was struck by a vehicle driven by Clarkson Smith, jr., 23, of 219 Mississippi ave. se. as he was crossing Nichols ave. at the crosswalk. He was treated at Providence Hospital for a possible fracture of the left leg and a lacerated finger and released.

According to Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, King's death was due to a pulmonary embolism which followed an operation performed on him for a fractured femur he sustained in the accident.

Traffic deaths at this time last year also stood at eight. There were 72 traffic deaths in all last year.

Streetcar Motorman Held After Accident

Prince Georges County police yesterday charged a Capital Transit streetcar motorman with failure to stop after an accident Saturday night in which one person was seriously injured.

Held under $500 bond was Raymond A. Kerns, 35, 409 Timber la., Falls Church, Va., the driver of the streetcar which, police said, struck Vernon Coatley, 26, of 4501 Banner st., North Brentwood, at 41st st and Rhode Island ave.

Coatley is in Freedmen's hospital in a critical condition, with a head injury.

Sherman Prout, 5500 46th ave., North Brentwood, who witnessed the accident, said the streetcar slowed down but did not stop. Charles F. Caldwell, Hyattsville policeman, who made the arrest, said Kerns denied knowning he knowing he had hit anyone. Coatley, the policeman said, apparently slipped on an icy loading platform and was hit by the car.

A hearing for Kerns was tentatively set for February 19 in Hyattsville police court.

Thieves Take 1000-Pound Safe, $5720

Stalwart yeggs carted a 1000-pound safe from the Food Fair supermarket, 3528 E Capitol st., over the weekend, police learned yesterday.

Samuel Steffel, store manager, said he didn't mind losing the safe—it was the $5000 cash and $720 worth of checks it contained that made him grieve.

A store hand truck was missing, presumably used by the lusty thieves to remove the safe.

Police found the burglars gained entrance by prying open a transom, and said it must have taken at least four men to make off with the ponderous booty.

Senate Probers to Rule On Md. Vote Validity

Disputed ballots and alleged irregularities in the 1946 Maryland senatorial election will be ruled on by the Senate investigators when they get the data compiled within "two or three weeks," Senator Jenner (R., Ind.) said yesterday.

D. John Markey, Republican, is contesting the election of Senator O'Conor, Democrat. The contest now involves 3400 alleged irregularities.

Jenner, chairman of an election subcommittee, said: "Data will be studied for the purpose of ruling on the validity or invalidity of the votes cast in Prince Georges County and some wards in Baltimore, where an undue amount of irregularities and 'ghost voting' was said to exist."

Consumptives Relief

The Junior Jewish Consumptives Relief Society will meet today at 8 p. m. in the Willard Hotel, Parlors A, B and C.

McMillan Cites Few Letters Favoring Home Rule in District

Representative John L. McMillan (D., S. C.) member of the House subcommittee holding hearings on the Auchincloss-Ball bill, said last night he does not believe residents here really want home rule because he has received only three letters concerning it.

He expressed that view during a forum discussion over Radio Station WINX. He spoke against the measure with C. Melvin Sharpe, chairman of the Committee of 100 on the Federal City.

Speaking for home rule were Philip L. Graham, publisher of The Washington Post, and Harry S. Wender, chairman of the D. C. Recreation Board.

The light mail received by the Congressman was attributed by Graham to local residents' "lack of training in suffrage that most Americans have rather than to any apathy about home rule."

Wender added, "We have never been trained to write letters to Congressman because we have never had Congressmen representing us. No one before has ever suggested we should write letters."

Sharpe expressed "a very serious doubt as to whether the great mass of the people who are residents and heavy taxpayers" would vote for home rule as a plebescite "under Federal aegis."

He said he was not convinced to the contrary by such indexes as The Washington Post poll which Graham said recently reported some 70 per cent of residents here as favoring local suffrage.

Graham replied that he and many other supporters of home rule would welcome a plebescite to give residents here a chance, to indorse home rule prior to adoption.

Rat Control Urged As Source of Feed, Grain for Europe

Effective rat control in rural areas could save enough grain and feed to supply our European commitments, John C. Jones, of the Department of the Interior Fish and Wildlife Service, declared yesterday at a meeting of county agents from six Southern Maryland Counties in Marlboro.

Jones estimated one rat can cause $20 damage a year and pointed out that rats have from three to 12 litters per year of six to 22 rats. Extermination methods of a week's duration, he said, would set back the rat population only nine months.

With antu, a new wartime rat poison perfected by Dr. Kurt P. Richter at Johns Hopkins University up to 90 per cent of the rats can be eliminated, Jones said, but he cautioned the agents in the use of antu as it is also poisonous to stock, dogs and humans.

Booker T. Washington Honor Pleases Truman

By The Associated Press

President Truman says he is glad a new postoffice is being opened at Booker T. Washington's birthplace in Virginia.

The new postoffice, near Rocky Mount, Va., will be opened with ceremonies on Lincoln's Birthday Thursday.

In a letter to S. J. Phillips, president of the Booker T. Washington Birthplace Memorial, which Phillips made public here yesterday, Mr. Truman said:

"The establishment of this postoffice at Booker T. Washington's birthplace will serve as a continuous reminder of the freedom of opportunity that is ours and the importance of the will to achieve and make the most of it."

Laborites Win First Test on Medical Bill

London, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—The Commons reaffirmed its approval of free medical care for every person in Britain today, giving the Labor government a first-round victory in its fight with the powerful British Medical Association over the new socialized medicine plan.

The House gave Health Minister Bevan a renewed mandate to put Britain's state medicine scheme into effect on schedule July 5, despite a threatened boycott by organized doctors and dentists.

The approval was given by voice vote after Bevan bitterly denounced medical leaders as "raucous voiced, politically poisoned people who are organizing a squalid political conspiracy" to sabotage the new national health service act.

NBC Blocks Theater's Use Of Telecast

New York, Feb. 9 (AP).—The question of ownership rights in television broadcasts was raised today by the National Broadcasting Co.

As a result, a television showing tonight at RKO's 58th st. theater, at which a fight broadcast over NBC's television station WNBT was to have been picked up, was canceled.

NBC disclosed it asked the postponement pending further clarification of television broadcast ownership rights. NBC telecasts are preceded by a notice that they may not be used for exhibition at places where admission or cover charges are made.

A RKO spokesman declined to say if any legal test of ownership would be made.

Poland Flouts Catholics on Divorce Law

Warsaw, Feb. 9 (AP).—The breach between the Communist-led Polish government and the Catholic Church widened today.

A government spokesman said no changes were contemplated in Poland's new marriage and divorce laws to meet objections of the church. He declared the church must keep out of the nation's political affairs.

The laws had been cited by the Catholic hierarchy as a stumbling block to reestablishment of diplomatic relations between the Vatican and the Polish government.

The new law recognizes only the legality of marriages performed by civil registrars, although it does not bar church ceremonies. It also permits divorce, for the first time in 1000 years.

The bishops demand likewise restoration of freedom of speech, press and conscience. The church asked that such guarantees be placed in the new Polish constitution now being written.

Three Plans to Police Reds Urged on House Committee

By Dillard Stokes
Post Reporter

Three brands of Red-bane were urged on the House Un-American Activities Committee yesterday.

1. Five District Bar Association spokesmen wanted a law to make all Communists register, and tag their propaganga "anti-American."

2. Admiral William H. Standley, former Ambassador to Moscow, wanted this Government to adopt the methods of the Kremlin with a law "to treat Russians the way they treat us."

3. Samuel M. Birnbaum, judge advocate of the American Legion in New York, wanted to make it a crime to believe in, or advocate, Communism.

Dulles Dissents

From John Foster Dulles, one of our United Delegates, the committee got a letter saying that he did not think any law would work against such a nebulous thing as the communist Party.

Those in the District bar delegation were President George E. McNeil, former President Godfrey L. Munter, Kenneth N. Parkinson secretary, Edmund D. Campbell, a director, and Dr. Charles S. Collier, George Washington University professor of constitutional law.

The District spokesman said they thought their plan to fight Communism would not violate the Constitution if made a law. Here it is:

a. Registration of persons and groups favoring political changes in this country by other than Constitutional, democratic methods.

b. Make all who register label their mail, papers, handbills and the like with the words "anti-American" and use the words on radio programs.

c. Set up an agency to see that they use the label.

d. Outlaw all who register from public office and Government jobs, except in the armed forces.

Labor Union Bar

e. Bar them, as well, from key jobs in labor unions or in industry.

f. Send lists of those who register to unions and industrial firms, to put on their bulletin boards.

g. Punish heavily those who do not register.

h. Lock up registrants ordered out of the country, when their own countries won't take them.

Parkinson said his group thought such a law would draw a line between knowing backers and innocent victims of anti-American ideas.

Admiral Stanley—who is 73 years old, was our envoy to Russia in 1942 and 1943. He said he found people there friendly to this country, and that it is Communists inside America who are a danger. The admiral blamed these American Reds for labor's demands for more pay, for upsets in our economy, for recent seizure of railroads and the coal mines during strikes, and for other ills.

Stanley lives in San Diego, Calif. The Communists are active there, he said and "influence the school system, school books and things like that." He favored a law to make Communists register, but thought a law making Communism the same as treason would not work.

Communism As Crime

Birnbaum—the Legion spokesman—said he thought Congress, under its power to protect the Government, could make it a crime to believe in or advocate communism.

Dulles, who is a foreign affairs adviser to the Republican Party, said in his letter that communism was clearly subversive, and that the party got its orders from Moscow.

On the other hand, Dulles added, in France, Italy and to a less degree this country, there are many Communists who see the party as a way to reform, and do not want to overthrow the government by force.

The trouble with laws against communism, he added, is that you can't tell one group from the other.

There are two bills before the Un-American Activities Subcommittee, which is headed by Representative Richard M. Nixon (R., Calif.). One would make Communists register, the other would declare communism to be treason.

The GI's Bride Was Disappointed

Associated Press WIREPHOTO

MRS. IRENE PETIFURD, 21-year-old British war bride of an American soldier, hugs her 3-year-old daughter, Virginia, on the child's arrival in London. Mrs. Petifurd married Corpl. Charles Petifurd of Sikeston, Mo., when she was 17, and left him to return to England when, she says, the "spacious life" her husband offered in America turned out to be "a cabin without bath or running water in a hick town"

143 Top Unions, 2776 Locals File Non-Communist Affidavit

By the end of January, 143 international unions and 2776 local unions had complied with the Communist-oath requirements of the Taft-Hartley Act.

The National Labor Relations Board announced yesterday it had almost 26,000 affidavits from union officers, avowing they were not members or supporters of the Communist Party.

Seventy-nine AFL internationals and 23 CIO and 41 independents complied. Of the local unions, 2126 were AFL, 221 CIO and 429 were independent.

Before a union can avail itself of the services of the NLRB its officers and those of its parent international union must execute the affidavits. Over the weekend, one local union broke away from its national organization because the latters officers refused to take the oath.

The local was a right-wing group of 355 workers employed by Remington Rand, the A. B. Dick Co., the Dictaphone Corp. and the Marchant Calculating Co. They broke away from the left-dominated CIO United Electrical Workers.

The group's former president, James J. Conroy, said his followers had formed an independent union and had filed petitions with the NLRB to be recognized as bargaining agents.

Conroy said the membership was unable to use the NLRB for any reason whatsoever and that the UEW officers' refusal to sign has "left us high and dry." Conroy has been a long-time critic of UEW charging that it is "Communist-led."

Remington Rand recently announced that it would refuse to bargain with UEW until it complied with the law.

"There's Always Room at the Top!"
AND HERE IS THE CAR THAT PROVES IT!

Name the only new car in the last ten years that has successfully entered the select group of America's fine cars. You're right, there's only one — the Frazer Manhattan! And not only has this spectacular car entered the field, it now leads its price class — which includes cars bearing motordom's proudest names!

Over 40,000 owners now know the reasons why the Frazer Manhattan has rightfully found its place at the top. They looked. They compared. And then they bought. Undisputed style leadership and exceptional performance — combined with economy totally unexpected in a big car! — are among the reasons. Unequalled riding comfort and interiors of incomparable luxury and distinction are additional reasons which led these owners to the car of their choice . . .

The Frazer Manhattan

Hear Newscope with Wendell Noble, 4 times weekly over Mutual

At The Top In Beauty! The Frazer Manhattan's style-leadership has earned top honors in international competitions. In attempted imitation by other manufacturers it has been flattered. And, finally, in preference of America's most discriminating motor car owners, it has won!

At The Top In Performance! The Frazer Manhattan's performance includes far more than restfulness in driving ease and riding comfort. It provides mile after mile of such confidence—in traffic or on the open road—that you meet any motoring condition with peace of mind.

At The Top In Value! The Frazer Manhattan is designed and built to hold its place at the top! Its 100% postwar engineering gives you every advantage of the accelerated technical progress of the war years. It means trouble-free long life and low service and depreciation costs.

Didden Sees Bank Credit Tightening

By S. Oliver Goodman

A general tightening of bank credit is foreseen this year by George A. Didden, jr., president of the National Capital Bank.

Didden

In his annual report to stockholders Didden stated. "The paramount question to be answered in 1948 is whether there will be sufficient available credit at bank rates to meet business requirements. Those who cannot obtain bank credit must be financed by the Government, go to money lenders or liquidate their businesses, and for many I fear the latter."

Although some may fall by the wayside, Didden added, "I am confident that the high unfulfilled demand, both foreign and domestic, with sustained purchasing power in the hands of consumers, insures a continuation of high business activity during 1948."

Commenting on the bank's operations, he pointed out that the Southeast institution enjoyed a 17 per cent increase in accounts to 11,351, interest and discount on loans rose 27.8 per cent to $208,180, income from investments in Government securities fell 12 per cent and operating expenses rose about 20 per cent.

Net operating earnings before income taxes totaled $126,968 for the year, a gain of 10 per cent over the previous year. After a capital loss of $7668, net profit was placed at $119,301, against $109,589 in the previous year.

A pension plan for employes, remodeling and expansion of the main office and larger quarters for the branch office are being weighed by the board of directors.

ADD ODDITIES: Scented pajamas will be added to store counters any day now. The maker, Kaylon, Inc., says "people don't spend money without reason; you must show them sound merchandise—a garment with something more in it, a special fragrance." This scented idea at $5.95 a whiff, is what Kaylon calls the "plus factor in doing business."

PROMOTION: Raymond J. Wise, one-time president of the Chevy Chase Dairy Co. of Washington (now known as Chestnut Farms-Chevy Chase Dairy Co.), has been elevated in the National Dairy Products Corp. lineup. His new position will be assistant vice president of the parent organization and regional director of milk and ice cream operations in the upper Mississippi-Missouri valley area. Wise's most recent position was president of Detroit Creamery Co., a National Dairy subsidiary. Son of one of the founders of the Wise Brothers Chevy Chase Dairy, Washington, he was born and raised on a dairy farm near Washington. He started as a route man for his father's dairy, later becoming sales manager and finally president.

Wise

RFC SECRETARY: James O. Cole has been appointed secretary of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, succeeding A. T. Hobson, who will retire. Cole, who lives in Silver Spring, is 36 and started his RFC service in 1933. He attended Notre Dame University and completed his undergraduate work at the George Washington University. He graduated from Georgetown Law School in 1939 and is a member of the bar.

WHO'S WHO TODAY: Capt. Robert A. Lavender of Washington, recently retired from the Navy, has been retained as a consultant to the Fairchild Engine & Airplane Corp. A patent adviser to the Atomic Energy Commission, Lavender will devote a large part of Fairchild's project at Oak Ridge, Tenn., which is concerned with application of nuclear energy to propulsion of aircraft. . . . W. H. Dupka has been named director of Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp., succeeding E. J. Kulas, resigned. . . . Harry S. Ivins has been named Washington representative of Warren Webster & Co., heating equipment firm. . . . Paul J. Noftsker, formerly chief passenger agent for United Air Lines in Washington, has been elevated to chief of stewardess service at Chicago.

Lavender

ODD LOTS: Elements of strength in the railroad picture, including a more favorable ICC attitude, were stressed here by W. Wendell Reuss in a recent talk sponsored by Bache & Co. . . . Trans World Airline reported January surge of traffic established all-time records in every phase of the system's domestic operation . . . Laidlaw & Co. said: "It is our view that sound equities have discounted many of the unfavorable elements in the economic situation and that any signs of a correction in maladjusted elements would not bring a much further decline in stock prices before a worthwhile recovery would ensue" . . . The Hahn Gas & Oil Co., headed by a Pittsburgh florist, has tapped a well near Canonsburg, Pa., worth an estimated $400,000 annually . . . Atlas Plywood Corp. has acquired the Williamstown Package Mfg. Co. of Williamstown, N. C.

Business Outlook

History Is, Like Whisky, What Distillers Make It

By J. A. Livingston

PUBLICKER INDUSTRIES, INC., which in the last 15 years has broken into the whisky business in a large, prosperous way and converted what was once a Big Four into a Big Five, doesn't believe in history. The Distilled Spirits Institute, embracing among numerous companies three members of the Big Five—National Distillers, Hiram Walker, and Distillers-Seagrams—plumps hard for history and wants it to repeat and repeat and repeat. And Schenley Distillers Corp., also in the Big Five, has a historical whim of its own, which persons in the Department of Agriculture and elsewhere are prone to describe as a "whim of iron," with due apologies, of course, to Oliver Herford.

Livingston

Each of these liquor groups is high-minded and public-spirited—in its own interest. Publicker has the largest capacity to produce whisky and neutral spirits. When it comes to allocating grain for the manufacture of whisky and neutral spirits, it regards history as inadequate—inadequate to Publicker, that is. In the historical period chosen, Publicker was not using its capacity as fully as other companies. So Publicker would like Secretary Anderson to allocate grain on the basis of—well, guess. Yes, you guessed it the first time, capacity.

Now it so happens that the slice of history chosen by Secretary of Agriculture Anderson for distributing grain to distillers was the four months from December 1, 1946, through March 31, 1947. That was when the Government freed the distillers from controls—in other words, gave them their heads, which many people, not all prohibitionists, argue was a mistake. The Distilled Spirits Institute would have preferred the seven months period from December 1, 1946, through June 30, 1947. During that time, Distilled Spirits members used a fairly good percentage of their distilling capacity. However, when Anderson decided on the shorter slice of history, the institute accepted with good grace.

SCHENLEY HEWED to a different history. Schenley is a great marketing organization. It has concentrated on building up fine, brand names and getting distribution. Its distilling capacity is not so large, proportionate to its sales, as say, Publicker's. So Schenley argued that the distribution should be based on case sales of liquor. That would give its distilleries a chance to operate at a high level of capacity. At the same time, of course, Schenley could continue to buy the output of smaller distillers, as has been its wont.

Such miscellaneous notions of (a) what is history and (b) what is the proper application of history belies the theory that man differs from all other animals in his reasonableness and his ability to sift out facts and espy a community of agreeable self-interest. Here is an industry located in the United States and Canada. The men in it usually speak English, though not necessarily the same language and to one another. Also they sell the same customers or at least try to by assiduous cultivation—sometimes called "poaching on"—of one another's territories.

Secretary Anderson tried to resolve the issue by ruling in favor of two-thirds history, one-third capacity. Result: Dissatisfaction on all hands. And when Congress failed to come through with enabling legislation for him by January 31, the companies once again were allowed their heads. President Truman promptly called upon the industry to adhere to the Anderson formula. Publicker wired the President it would. The Distilled Spirits Institute wired its members to moderate their distilling, and some undoubtedly are. Schenley, by advertising and law suits, has fought the entire theory.

ALL THIS goes to show that men are men and always jockeying for position. In this, the liquor industry is no different from the automobile industry, the steel industry or the export industry. But distillers are somewhat more vulnerable to attack. The United States still has a large group of prohibitionists. According to Gallup polls, one third of the voters would reimpose prohibition. So, it's surprising the distillers don't go along with the President and Anderson and play like "good boys"—especially since it won't cost them anything but their right to act as they please when they please. As A. P. Fenderson, assistant to the president of Publicker, testified before the joint committee on the economic report, the industry already has "suffered a substantial loss in public prestige."

The liquor industry is unique. It can curtail production without curtailing sales or the American public's propensity to imbibition. And profits, loveliest of all fruits, would go on as usual. To be sure, stocks of aging whisky would be drawn down. But even that is beneficial. The threat of over-production, ever the curse of the industry, would be minimized. A price war would be averted. In short, curtailment would be a preparation for peace. But who wants that?

Food Machinery Buys Woodstock, Va., Plant

San Jose, Calif., Feb. 9 (AP).—Food Machinery Corp. has announced the purchase of Grabill Manufacturing Co. of Woodstock, Va., makers of apple packing equipment.

Food Machinery Corp. said it would continue to manufacture the packing machinery and will expand the list of packing house products to be built in the Woodstock plant.

Chicago Grain

Chicago, Feb. 9 (AP).—Grains made a strong recovery on the Board of Trade today, canceling a small part of the heavy losses of last week. The market opened higher and for the most part held above the previous close throughout the session, ending not far below the day's top.

The recovery was not unexpected in view of the recent sharp break. Dealers said the market's technical position had been improved and prices were entitled to at least a temporary rally. A major factor in the advance was simply a let-up in the excessive liquidation of last week.

Wheat closed 5½ to 8 cents higher, May 2.57¼@2.56⅝; corn was 5⅜ to 8 cents higher, May, 2.21⅛@2.21; oats were 2¼ to 4½ cents higher, May, 1.08½@1.08¾, and soybeans were 3 to 4¼ cents higher, March, 3.57.

Mills gave the wheat market strong support, reflecting an expansion in flour business. Large chain bakers reportedly were buying for February and March shipment in contrast to their recent hand-to-mouth policy. For some time the bakers have been holding away from the market, believing prices were too high.

Despite today's rally, prices are still sharply under seasonal peaks, made in most cases on January 16. Wheat is off 32 to 49¼ cents, corn, 37¾ to 49½; oats, 8⅞ to 21¼ and soybeans, 84 to 85.

Ash Wednesday Services to Usher in Area's Lenten Season

By Robert Tate Allan
Post Reporter

Ash Wednesday services tomorrow in Greater Washington area churches will launch the Lenten season.

Lent is a 40-day self-denial period (Sundays not calculated), climaxed with services Easter, March 28, and Good Friday March 26.

At Catholic masses, priests will make a cross-mark on worshipers' foreheads with ashes from last Palm Sunday's fronds that have been blessed. Downtown and midtown churches have arranged daily noonday Lenten services for shoppers, workers in offices and stores, Government employes, and others. Weekly neighborhood rites also are planned in centrally located churches.

Daily Services Planned

The Washington Federation of Churches will sponsor daily services, Mondays through Fridays from 12:05 p. m. to 12:25 p. m., at the National Presbyterian Church, 18th st. and Connecticut ave. nw. Dr. Carl Heath Kopf, new minister of First Congregational Church, will preach Ash Wednesday and Thursday, and Dr. Carl R. Simon, pastor of Keller Memorial Lutheran Church, Friday.

Ash Wednesday services at Epiphany Episcopal Church, 1317 G st. nw., will include communion at 7:30 a. m.; 10 a. m., and 12:30 p. m., and preaching at 12 p. m., 5:30 p. m. and 8 p. m. Daily services at 12 noon will continue through Lent. Among the speakers scheduled to be heard are Dr. Joseph R. Sizoo, onetime pastor of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church; Dr. Ralph W. Sockman, pastor of New York City's Christ Methodist Church, and eminent radio preacher; Dr. Donald B. Aldrich, dean of Princeton University Chapel and others. Dr. Charles W. Sheerin, rector, will conduct the Ash Wednesday services at Epiphany Church.

To Preach at Novenas

Monsignor Fulton J. Sheen, Catholic University theologian, will preach at Miraculous Medal Novenas on Lenten Wednesdays at 5:20 p. m. and 8 p. m. at St. Stephen's Catholic Church, 25th st. and Pennsylvania ave. nw.

Services for the Capitol Hill area will be held daily from 12:10 p. m. to 12:30 p. m. at Reformation Lutheran Church, 212 East Capitol st. Dr. Oscar F. Blackwelder, pastor, of Reformation Church, will speak tomorrow, and the Rev. Robert J. Plumb, rector of St. Mark's Episcopal Church, Thursday and Friday.

All Lutheran churches in the Greater Washington area will celebrate communion Ash Wednesday at 8 p. m. Zeb Trexler, president of the Brotherhood of the United Lutheran Church in America, will address a Lenten supper Thursday at 6:45 p. m., at Reformation Church.

Bishop Noble C. Powell of the Maryland Episcopal Diocese will address services tomorrow at 8 p. m. at the Episcopal Church of St. Stephen and the Incarnation, 16th and Newton sts.

Other Events Scheduled

Among other Ash Wednesday events are:

Communion at 8 p. m. at First Congregational Church, 10th and G st. nw., with the Rev. Carl Heath Kopf preaching.

First in series of six Wednesday Lenten luncheons at 12:30 p. m. at Central YMCA, 1736 G st. nw., with Dr. Clarence W. Cranford, pastor of Calvary Baptist Church, as opening speaker.

Low masses and distribution of ashes at 6:45 a. m. and 9:30 a. m. at St. Agnes' Episcopal Church, 46 Q st. nw.

Communion and "Quiet Hour" at 11 a. m. at Transfiguration Episcopal Church, 1415 Gallatin st. nw., and penitential office at 8 p. m.

Maryland Boxers Held to Draw by Michigan State

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

THE ALL-AMERICA Conference, after muscling into the pro football business a couple of years ago, making faces at the National Football League and claiming to be a big league, too, has hauled in its horns somewhat. Or at least that would seem to be so.

POVICH

A sudden lethargy has set in with the AAC since the end of the last season, and the National Football League has been grabbing off most of the important college stars who will graduate into the pros. A year ago it was the All-America, signing such as Buddy Young and other big names, which was stealing the winter football show, but they are running a dismal second in their negotiations with the graduating collegians this year.

The other day when the Chicago Rockets of the AAC signed Ziggy Czarobski, the good Notre Dame tackle, it marked the only interruption of the parade of stars who have been moving into NFL ranks.

The Chicago Bears grabbed off Johnny Lujack and George Connor from Notre Dame. The Giants outbid Brooklyn for Charley Conerly, the Mississippi U. triple threat; Pittsburgh any day will announce that it has come up with Ray Evans, the Kansas whirlwind back, and the Giants have signed Bill Swiacki of Columbia, the East's best end. Harry Gilmer moved up with the Redskins.

UNLESS THE All-America can come up with the likes of Bob Chappuis, of Michigan, or Bobby Layne, the Texas U. whizz-kid, it will be a pretty bleak outcome for the new league. The Baltimore Colts have their lines out for Layne and may sign him, but the richer clubs in the league, like the New York Yankees, the Cleveland Browns, and the Los Angeles Dons have not gone into the player market with much enthusiasm.

Name players are, of course, no guarantee that a club will be stronger. There are more good ballplayers in the pro leagues from smaller colleges than from the big schools that produced headline figures. Spec Sanders, the best player in the AAC, was a second-string back at Texas. But as a season seat sale tonic, the signing of the big-shot collegians is powerful.

The Redskins, in signing Gilmer, finally found themselves bidding for an expensive guy. Despite the success of the Redskins over the years, they didn't have to go high for talent. They signed Sammy Baugh at a then-fancy figure in 1937, and weren't compelled to put out heavily for another player in the next 10 years.

THE ALL-AMERICA Conference is still well-heeled, and that is fortunate, because only half of its eight clubs did better than break even last season. But Admiral Jonas Ingram, the league commissioner, is very much annoyed at this point by the selfishness of the richer clubs in his conference and said so on a visit to Washington the other day.

"Those clubs with the money have to recognize the fact that we have weak spots in the league, and give them some help. I don't mean with cash, we have plenty of that, but with players," said Ingram. "They ought to know that with a little better balance in Baltimore and Brooklyn, all of the clubs could make a lot of money. They have to see that, if we ever want to stay big in the football business."

Ingram, in fact, declared, "They can get a new commissioner if they don't adopt some of my suggestions for the good of the league. So far the temptation to load up with all the talent they can get and turn nothing loose to a weaker club has been too great for some of our owners. I thought I was working with smarter people."

THE CHIEF results of the AAC activity this winter have been the signing of new coaches, Ed McKeever by the Rockets, and Carl Voyles by the Brooklyn Dodgers. Coaches are necessary, of course, but they don't pull anybody in at the gate, and the new and important faces among the players that the public likes have not found their way into the AAC.

The financial structure of the new league has been bettered by the award of the impoverished Brooklyn franchise to Branch Rickey of the baseball Dodgers, but thus far Rickey hasn't helped the league competitively. His club had the draft rights to both Gilmer and Conerly, but was outbid by the NFL in both cases.

It may be that one of the less-wealthy clubs in the AAC, Baltimore, will finally do the entire league a service by luring Layne into the circuit. The Colts' hopes of landing him are still high and they are prepared to overpay him if necessary. If that happens, the rich clubs in the league ought to compensate the Colts as league benefactors.

Hank Nears Agreement With Tribe

Cleveland, Feb. 9 (AP).—Hank Greenberg, former major league home run king, conferred with Cleveland Indians' officials tonight, and a Tribe spokesman said "it's a fair assumption that Greenberg will sign a contract with the Indians as a pitcher-coach."

After arriving at the Cleveland airport from Newark this afternoon, Greenberg immediately closeted himself with Manager Lou Boudreau and other Indian officials for a conference in his hotel suite.

Boudreau declined to interrupt the conference to answer reporters' questions, but a front office spokesman of the Tribe said Big Hank probably would sign, and trat terms of the contract and salary were yet to be decided.

Veeck Wants Hank

"More definite" information may come later tonight at the annual dinner of the Cleveland Baseball Writers' Association, Boudreau said.

President Bill Veeck of the Indians, who conferred with Greenberg in New York last week, said prior to Hank's arrival today:

"I would be glad to have Greenberg with the Indians in any capacity. I have talked with him several times since the World Series and made him several propositions, including one as a player coach, but we have never really talked financial terms."

In Philadelphia earlier today, Earle Mack, assistant manager of the Philadelphia Athletics announced Greenberg turned down an offer to play with the A's during the coming season. Earle said "we wanted him as an outfielder and pinchhitter and as first base insurance for Ferris Fain."

The assistant manager said Greenberg informed him by telephone "he was giving up the game."

Bo McMillin May Join Pros

Detroit, Feb. 9 (AP).—Alvin (Bo) McMillin, head football coach at Indiana University, conferred today with the management of the professional Detroit Lions but club officials said afterwards that "no definite offer" had been made.

It apparently was the first step taken by the new owners in their announced intention of seeking a "big name" coach.

Edwin Anderson, vice president of the Detroit Football Co., confirmed that he, W. O. (Spike) Briggs and Phil Hart, also members of the corporation, had met with the Hoosier coach.

Anderson said that while no offer has been made, it didn't mean that overtures would not be made to McMillin. Nor did it mean, Anderson added, that McMillin would get an offer.

McMillin, whose visit to Detroit was unexpected, indicated that he was strictly a college man and declared there was little likelihood he would take a pro job at this time.

"I hope I'm not mentioned as a candidate," McMillin said. "I'm giving my opinion of the coaches they are considering and also some general football advice that they may find useful in their new venture."

McMillin has been at Indiana since 1934 and now is signed to a 10-year contract believed to call for $12,500 a year. He was voted coach of the year in 1945 after winning Indiana's first Big Nine title in 46 years.

Catholic High Tourney Slated

A single-loss elimination basketball tournament for the smaller Catholic high schools of the District of Columbia and Maryland will take place on March 12, 13 and 14 at the Priory School gymnasium.

Priory, sponsor of the tournament, announced yesterday that seven of the eight places in the tournament have been filled. The teams which have already agreed to play are Priory, St. Anthony's and St. Paul's of Washington, St. Mary's of Annapolis, St. Mary's of Hagerstown, St. John's of Frederick and St. John's De Matha of Hyattsville.

Across The Nation:

Boston, Feb 9 (AP).—Gil Dodds was stricken with the mumps today—and friends said it is doubtful that the "Flying Parson" will run in the Baxter Mile in the New York A. C. games, New York, on Saturday.

Dodds ran the fastest indoor mile ever run in Boston last Saturday night when he won the the B. A. A.'s Hunter Mile in 4:08.1.

Dodds, who is a graduate of Gordon Divinity School, preached yesterday at the First Baptist Church in Arlington.

He was taken ill a short time later. Doctors at the hospital said Dodd's condition was not serious—"just an ordinary case of the mumps."

Branca Gets $14,000

Brooklyn, Feb. 9 (AP).—Ralph Branca, 21-gamt winner with the Brooklyn Dodgers last year, has signed his 1948 contract, Club President Branch Rickey said today.

At Mount Vernon, N. Y., the 22-year-old right-hander told a reporter for the Daily Argus that it called for a salary of $14,000—twice the amount he received a year ago.

Giants Buy Stringer

Chicago, Feb. 9 (AP).—Second Baseman Lou Stringer, 28, today was sold to the New York Giants for the $10,000 waiver price by the Chicago Cubs. Stringer last year batted .292 for the Cubs' Los Angeles club in the Pacific Coast League.

Orioles Buy Riggs

Baltimore, Feb. 9 (AP).—The International League Orioles today announced the purchase of veteran third baseman Lew Rigg from St. Paul of the American Association in a straight cash deal. Riggs has been in organized baseball 18 years and will be 38 on the day the Birds open their campaign in April.

Nats Sign 20 Kids

Winter Garden, Fla., Feb. 9 (AP).—General Manager Zinn Beck of the Washington Nats baseball school today announced the signing of 20 players of the 180-odd students here for the school and tryout camp.

Eight infielders, six pitchers, four outfielders and two catchers were in the group signed for distribution to the budding Washington farm system.

Most Points, But . . .

Fulks Is Last On Shooting Percentage

By Morris Siegel
Post Reporter

THE NEW look in basketball statistics makes a piker out of Joe Fulks.

Probing through the weekly maze of figures issued by the Basketball Association of America, one learns that the Philadelphia hot-shot has almost lapped his nearest rival for high scoring honors. This distinction, however, is pooh-poohed by a school of theorists, pro courtmen then selves, who want to de-emphasize Mr. Fulks and beat drums for the men who have the greatest percentage of accuracy.

They would summons Baltimore's Buddy Jeanette, Washington's Bob Feerick and Baltimore's Chick Reiser front and center. Under this merit system, the altitudinous Mr. Fulks would bring up the rear.

WHILE JEANETTE, Feerick and Reiser, who make over 33 per cent of their shots, are taking bows, Fulks would be in the back row counting the 707 points he's made in 32 games and wondering what a guy has to do to get recognition.

He has made more points than Feerick and Jeannette combined, but is penalized, under the percentage system, because his average is less than 25 per cent.

If basketball averages were computed the same as baseball, Jeanette, Feerick and Reiser would be the leading batters with Fulks just an easy out.

In this bureau's book, however, Fulks is the best scorer in the BAA or any other league.

FULKS SHOOTS A lot, an awful lot, but that's what he's hired to do. In a recent game, his Warriors cracked down 113 times and he took 55 of those tries himself. In 32 games he's sent 960 shots toward the basket and 240 have registered.

Whenever the Warriors get close to the basket, they look for Fulks. He's the guy who can get them over the hump. And Fulks, not a set shot, fires from anywhere. He's probably made as many baskets shooting on one foot while being harrassed by two guards as he has from deep side court, his favorite spot.

Averages mean nothing to the big Kentuckian. To win a ball game, a team must score, he theorizes. Because of his unorthodox shooting he draws more fouls—302—than any two players in the league and he's up with the best of the free shot artists in percentage made—75 per cent.

It's Fulks' sentiments, also, that you can't score unless you shoot and to heck with the percentage.

Keep firing, Joe.

Spartans Get Revenge for Early Defeat

East Lansing, Mich., Feb. 9.—Michigan State College's boxing team earned a partial revenge for an earlier season defeat by Maryland by gaining a 4-4 deadlock with the Terps before 4500 fans here tonight.

Last December at New Orleans, La., Maryland punched out a 4½-3½ decision over the Spartans in the Sugar Bowl boxing classic.

The Terps appeared headed for their second triumph over the Spartans until they reached the final two bouts of the evening.

Lindquist Loses

George Smith, the extra-point kicking quarterback on the Spartans' football team last fall, brought the teams closer to their final score when he registered a technical knockout in the 175-pound class.

A barrage of blows to the face sent Walter Lindquist reeling at one minute, 54 seconds of the second round.

The evening's most devastating punch, perhaps, was thrown by Heavyweight Lloyd Coon when he knocked out Arnold Gibbs to give the Spartans their fourth point of the evening.

Both lads had their better moments in the first round. Early in the second round, Coon sent Gibbs to the canvas with a right. Returning to his feet at the count of nine, Gibbs was met by a volley of rights and lefts to the head which put him out for the next six minutes.

Maryland won a pair of matches by technical knockouts. In the 30-pound class, Andy Quattrocchi stopped Henry Capraro for the second time this season in one minute 10 seconds of the second round. In the 165-pound class, Bob Gregson likewise won his second meeting with John Buda, a swinging right hand whistling Buda to the canvas in one minute 10 seconds of the first round.

Barney Lincoln had his bright moments with Spartan Chuck Davey, the National Collegiate 135-pound defending champion, before losing by decision. Both southpaws, Lincoln drew early points when he floored Davey with a right to the head early in the first round. After figuring Lincoln's fighting tsyle, Davey later had the Terp at his mercy. Lincoln remained on his feet to the end although he absorbed plenty of punishment.

Two of the night's bouts ended in draws. In the 125-pound class, Al Salkowski of Maryland, split points with Ernie Charboneau, while Paul Oliver did likewise for Maryland with Jack Tierney in the 155-pound class.

The deadlock brought Maryland's season's record to three victories, one tie and a defeat at the hands of Army. Michigan State's record now shows one victory against one defeat and tonight's tie.

Summaries:

125 pounds—Al Salkowski (Md.) drew with Ernie Charboneau (MSC), 29-29.

130 pounds—Andy Quattrocchi (Md.) scored a technical knockout over Henry Capraro in 1:10 of second round.

135 pounds—Chuck Davey (MSC) decisioned Barney Lincoln (Md.), 29-27.

145 pounds—Paul Oliver (Md.) drew with Jack Tierney (MSC), 29-29.

155 pounds—Ed Rieder (Md.) decisioned Ray Mariucci (MSC), 29-27.

165 pounds—Bob Gregson (Md.) scored a technical knockout over John Buda (MSC), 1:10 of first round.

175 pounds—George Smith (MSC) scored a technical knockout over Walter Lindquist (Md.) in 1:54 of second round.

Heavyweight—Lloyd Coon (MSC) knocked out Arnold Gibbs (Md.) in 1:00 of second round.

Bell Meets Italian

Chicago, Feb. 9 (AP).—Italian heavyweight champion Enrico Bertola, 24, will make his American ring debut in a 10-rounder against Jimmy Bell of Washington, D. C., atthe Chicago Coliseum, Tuesday, February 17. Matchmaker Harry Mendel announced today.

Lions Acquire 2 New Players

With three key men injured and a fourth sold to Pittsburgh, the crippled Washington Lions are flying two promising youngsters down from Quebec in time for tonight's contest with the league-leading Pittsburgh Hornets.

The two newcomers are Tiny Tamminen and Maurice Robidas, outstanding prospects in the Quebec Senior B Group. Both are playing with the St. Hyacinth team in the league playoffs and will be with the Lions only for tonight and Friday's games with the Hornets.

Tamminen, 21, is a right winger or center, and Robidas, a strapping 185-pounder, is a defenseman. Under amateur rules the players, who have been signed by the Lions for next season, can play a maximum of three professional tryout games and still keep their amateur standing this season.

Minus Kenny Schultz, Red Raney and Pat Wilson, all out with injuries, and further weakened by the sale of Scotty Mair to Toronto, the Lions should find the two Quebec boys a big help in tonight's game.

Coach Jack Riley will again be in uniform and Bill Cowley, former Boston Bruin great, will help Riley in directing the team.

Devany-Lindsay Duo Wins Golf

Hollywood, Fla., Feb. 9 (AP).—Pat Devany and Marjorie Lindsay won the women's international four-ball golf tournament by beating favorites Louise Suggs and Jean Hopkins, 2 and 1, today.

Miss Hopkins missed a 12-foot putt on the thirty-fifth green, giving the Devany-Lindsay team a half and the championship.

Bus Information For Big Games

The season'se largest crowd is expected to attend the first college basketball double-header of the season at the National Guard Armory on Wednesday night.

George Washington plays Maryland, and Georgetown plays Penn State.

The Capital Transit Co. yesterday announced plans for handling those who ride buses and streetcars.

The B-2 buses (Nos. 30 and 91) from 17th st. and Pennsylvania ave. go within two blocks of the armory. Connections with this bus line are made by streetcars No. 40 (East Capital and 14th), No. 42 (13th and D sts. ne.) and Nos. 10 and 12 (13th and H sts. ne.)

Haynes 'KOs' Murray in 1st

Heavyweight Johnny Haynes of Los Angeles, scored a first-round technical knockout over Lee Q. Murray at Turner's Arena last night under circumstances so suspicious that the District Boxing Commission not only held up Murray's purse, but ordered him and his handlers to appear before the commission today to explain, if possible, what happened.

Shouts of "fake" and "he's drunk" came f... one of the 10...

Referee Harry Volkman halted the fight after Haynes, a ... had floored the bewildered Murray for the fourth time.

Dr. Don S. Knowlton, commission physician, examined Murray in the dressing room after the bout and said Murray showed no signs of having been either drinking or taking drugs.

In the opening four Ben Harrison scored a knockout over Coloni Davis. Harrison weighed 190, Davis 181. John Hansbury, Washington decisioned Jerome Pratt of Baltimore in another four-rounder.

Bobby Suma, Washington, 141½, scored a technical knockout over Puggy Lyons, 138½, also of Washington, in two minutes of the first round.

Jackie Ford, Washington decisioned Miles Jones, Washington in a sizzling four-rounder and in the five-rounder that preceeded the main event, Sonny Boy Bunn decisioned Jimmy Briscoe. Both boys are from Washington.

Is Fame Finally Catching Up With Haight?

Walter Becomes Outdoor Editor

THE PETITE checkroom girl took my hat, and my coat, too. I gave her a two-bit-tip look and she gave me a he's-too-fat-for-me stare, if you know what I mean.

Haight

So I wobbled toward the Statler's Capital Room, wondering if codfish ball, my 1-to-2 favorite, was on the luncheon buffet set up for the National Rifle Association and, if so, how I could out maneuver those pesky free-loaders from the Washington Star.

I figured I'd throw a block into Francis Stann, force Bert Hawkins out of the play, tackle Rod Thomas and outrun the other ten—that is, of course, providing there were codfish balls.

When I came into the room, everybody and his cousin—newspaper and radio guys, rifle big shots and little shots—rushed up shook my hand and patted me on the back, shouting "Congratulations! Congratulations!"

What had happened? Maybe I won an Irish Sweepstakes or struck gold or was named Mr. Hush or perhaps—no, I could remember most of the things I had done the night before.

When I looked perplexed, some one said, "We know you're just trying to be modest. Congratulations on being made Outdoor Editor of The Washington Post. Your boss told us all about it."

So I was right. I thought a friend had a double meaning recently when I met him on an icy street and he said, "Haight, you're slipping."

No justice, that's all. A guy works 25 years trying to get somewhere and ends up Outdoor Editor. The next step is out on the front pavement and after that, just plain out.

I always tried to do a good job—handled the horse stories Okay; didn't do bad with baseball when Shirley Povich went to the South Pacific, took over golf and even hockey when we were short-handed.

My Florida series must have provided a laugh somewhere along the line—and then while other guys were writing "Kilroy was here" on the walls, didn't I write "Post Want Ads Pay," just as the bosses said?

Don't get me wrong, there's no disgrace being an Outdoor Editor. They're all good fellows who come from good families, but, with most of them it's part-time work. Yes, I'm getting a part-time job. Next is part-time pay—then, no time, no pay.

Maybe there's a plot to get rid of me. Maybe my body would be found floating in some trout stream or somebody would shoot me for a moose or a sailfish would pull me overboard.

Then, perhaps it's just a scheme to get me out of the office—even my best friends haven't told me, but could be I have it. At least, I've been bathing fairly regular.

But to get back to the luncheon. I was feeling so low I refused to hurry up my first dessert in order to be on time for seconds, as I generally do.

When the card game got under way I began thinking—so I'm made Outdoor Editor without knowing it; I'm at the rifle association's convention with guys like rifle champion Wayne Moore and pistol champion Joe Benner around.

I arrived at a conclusion. The boss sent me here hoping Id get shot!

But I fooled him.

I only got half shot.

Olympics Prove That We're Still Innocents Abroad

St. Moritz, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—United States Olympic officials dug deep into their pockets tonight to settle the mountainous bills left behind by their departed athletes, and back of their polite official smiles there was plenty of private grumbling.

Although the Americans declared officially that they were "completely satisfied with everything" in the fifth winter Olympiad, it was no secret that they felt the costs incurred in the winning of three Olympic gold medals were somewhat exorbitant.

Chief sources of the American squawks were: (1) the bookkeeping systems employed by continental hotels; (2) the Europeans' lack of showmanship in competition; (3) Swiss gate keepers, and (4) the public address system at the winter games.

The Americans' Olympic budget was knocked haywire by those inevitable "extras" which all American tourists in Europe learn about through bitter experience. The athletes were charged for milk they never drank, officials said, along with fancy breakfasts which they perhaps ordered but shouldn't have been served. There also were hosts of charges for baths and small services which ordinarily are free in American hotels.

Baltimore Trades Bloom to Celtics

Boston, Feb. 9 (AP).—The Boston Celtics today traded Connie Simmons, lanky center, to the Baltimore Bullets for the veteran Mike Bloom, one of the best set shots in the Basketball Association of America.

Bloom, who achieved national recognition while at Temple University, is 29-years-old, six feet six inches tall and weighs 190. Simmons, only 21, has been an in and out player all season. He is six feet, eight inches tall and weighs 190.

The departure of Simmons leaves only Art Spector of the original group which started here last season with the Celtics.

St. Louis Snaps Irish Win Streak

Cerdan Knocks Out Frenchman Walzack

Paris, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Marcel Cerdan, European middleweight champion, knocked out Jean Walzack of France tonight in the fourth round of their scheduled nontitle 10-round bout at Palais de Sports.

A capacity crowd of 20,000 saw Walzack give Cerdan stiff competition until Marcel finished the Polish-Frenchman earliy in the fourth session. Cerdan weighed 159 pounds; Walzack, 151.

American Jayvees Down Montgomery

American University's Junior Varsity rallied in the last four minutes to defeat Montgomery Junior College, 52-46, last night at Bethesda-Chevy Chase High School.

Bernie Wolfe, Montgomery center, almost single-handedly kept his team in the game as he tossed in 11 field goals and a foul for 23 points. Jim Kranking was high for American with 17 points.

Filipowicz Quits At Mt. St. Mary's

Emmittsburg, Md., Feb. 9 (AP).—Steve Filipowicz, star fullback of the great Fordham football teams back in 1940 and 1942, resigned today as head football, basketball and baseball coach at little Mount St. Mary's College.

The Right Rev. John L. Sheridan, president of the school, announced Filipowicz wished to devote all his time to the Sunbury, Pa., Yankees of the Interstate Baseball League.

Walter Opekun, assistant coach at Mount St. Mary's since 1935 and acting head coach until Filipowicz came here last summer, will take over the top sports job again.

G.W.'s Cantwell Loses Conference Scoring Lead to Giermak

Redskins Move Players Closer To Band Music

Good news for the opposition was contained in the Washington Redskins' announcement yesterday that henceforth they'll occupy the south, instead of the north, sideline at Griffith Stadium.

The epic decision, it was revealed by General Manager Dick McCann, was NOT in deference to the 'Skins' new passing star from the south, Harry Gilmer.

"We've had some complaints from rival coaches," McCann said, "about the 'noise' created by the Redskin band, seated behind the south bench. Then, too, we think the band playing behind our own bench will improve our morale."

McCann cited a remark by Assistant Coach Luke Johnson of the Chicago Bears as an indication other teams like their football on the quiet side. With three bands blaring into every breathing spell at one game, Johnson philosophized: "This'd be a hell of a place for a guy who didn't like music."

Central Girls Win

The Central High girls rifle team defeated Anacostia, 451 to 437, yesterday on the Central range. High scorer for Central range. High scorer for Central was Margaret Doerman who scored 97 out of a possible 100.

Bill Cantwell Loses Lead In Southern

Richmond, Va., Feb. 9 (AP).—A fellow who played little basketball in high school and this year is only a college sophomore today took over the Southern Conference individual point-making leadership.

He is Chester Giermak, 6-foot-5-inch center at William and Mary. Giermak, a native of Chicago, shot his way past George Washington's Bill Cantwell.

Giermak paced the loop's scoring derby with 169 points. Cantwell, George Washington's captain and forward from Brooklyn, N. Y., was seven points behind.

Leonard Riddle, Clemson guard, was third with 143.

Interest in the Southern Conference race centered on second place. Even that position wasn't looked upon as too much of a scramble, since North Carolina's Tarheels were fairly firmly settled there with eight victories and one defeat.

North Carolina State's "Hoosier Hotshots" were generally regarded as being "in" as far as the top slot was concerned. The Wolfpack hadn't been beaten in six league starts. And the State outfit had already trounced its closest competitors, North Carolina and third-place George Washington. George Washington's conference record was 10 wins and three losses.

Would You Go Through This To See Game?

Quebec, Feb. 9 (AP).—The Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League have few fans as determined as Raymond and Louismare Paris, who traveled 175 miles by rowboat, snowmobile and train to see their favorite team take a 5-3 beating from the Detroit Red Wings in Montreal Saturday night.

The youthful brothers' determination to use tickets they won in a contest was disclosed today after they had headed home to Lotbiniere Village, 48 miles southwest of here on the south shore of the St. Lawrence River.

When the pasteboards reached them Friday night, they acted quickly. They launched a rowboat and daringly set out across the near-frozen St. Lawrence River, heading for Deschambault on the north shore 15 miles away.

They were compelled several times to disembark and haul the boat over long stretches of closely packed ice. They made Deschambault early Saturday, drove by snowmobile to a railway station 15 miles away and completed the trip by train.

Jim Lacy Leads Maryland Scorers

Jim Lacy of Loyola is tied for the head of the Maryland open-scoring parade, and only a rung from the top in the Mason-Dixon Conference.

Having played more games than any of his competitors, Lacy easily leads in total points with 325 in 20 contests. That averages 16.2, which is the same as Pete Clark of Mount St. Mary's has for 14 games. Clark was stopped for the first time this season Saturday when he was held for five points against Baltimore U.

Bob Searle of Navy climbed up to third place in Maryland open competition with a 14.3 average, displacing Walt Sibiski of Western Maryland, while Zedalis is fourth with 13.7.

AAU Boxing Opens With 25 Matches

The nineteenth annual District of Columbia AAU boxing tournament begins tonight at 8 in Turner's Arena.

Twenty-five amateur bouts are on the program, including five senior scraps that feature finalists in the recent Golden Gloves tournament.

Chief among the senior bouts are Harry Dillender, of Naval Receiving Station, vs. George Eckert, of Andrews Field, in the 135-pound class, and Lou Bianco, also of Andrews Field, vs. Granderson L. Jones of the Howard A. C., also in the 135-pound class.

In the novice division, the Eddie Dowana-Bob Dailey 160-pound scrap should be tops. Dowana of the National Guard, fought two sensational fights in the recent Golden Gloves, while Dailey, of the Southwest Barney Neighborhood House, is tabbed a comer.

Tonight's bouts range from the bantamweight class to middleweights. Contestants have been requested to report to the dressing room by 7 p. m.

Tonight's pairings:

They'll Spend the Dollar

Phils Willing to Gamble On Bobo—'If He Can Win'

Philadelphia, Feb. 9 (AP).—The one-buck price tag attached to Pitcher Bobo Newsom interests the Philadelphia Phillies—but the big righthander has "to gamble on himself."

The Phils won't. Says Manager Ben Chapman.

Bobo, a 38-year-old veteran of many a pitching battle, is looking for new hurling territory in the major leagues. His present owners are looking for a buyer and are willing to sell for $1.

Newsom did his twirling last season with the New York Yankees. He came through the regular play with a seven-win, five-loss record but did little in the World Series.

Yank Manager Bucky Harris thinks Newsom is too old.

Newsom thinks Harris is wrong.

Chapman is willing to let the vociferous Bobo prove it. Chapman says he'll listen to Bobo's "buy me" proposition "any time he wants to talk to me"—but—said Chapman:

"He's got to take a chance on himself."

Newsom has pitched for eight major league clubs. He was hired and fired four times by the Washington Nats.

"Any time a guy can win for me I'm interested," Chapman said, "especially if we can get him for a buck.

"That's a novelty in itself."

Chapman said the Phils would cough up the dollar "if he wants to gamble on himself."

"I've known him for years and when he's in shape and wants to win he's a lot of pitcher," Chapman said. "I don't know how he'd fit into our plans with three old-timers already on the staff. We have Dutch Leonard, Schoolboy Rowe and Oscar Judd.

"But if Bobo can win, we'll take him."

Baron, Rider Game Is Tops

The meeting of the Montgomery County championship team and one of the leading District inter-high contenders highlights today's 19-game scholastic basketball program.

The Montgomery champions are the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Barons, winners of 11 of their 14 starts. Their opponents today are Roosevelt's Rough Rigers, who are tied with Central for first place in the interhigh race with 4-1. Against all comers, the Riders have compiled a 10-4 record. Starting time is 3:30 p.m. at the Roosevelt gym.

This is the second meeting of the two. In the opening game of the season for both, Bethesda won, 35-29. Roosevelt dropped three of its next four, and then won nine in a row. It goes after its tenth straight today.

Pacing the Riders will be Billy Hibbs, 5 foot, 9 inch guard, who scored 32 points against Episcopal of Alexandria last week. He'll be backed up by Billy Paugh, Bob Zamsky, Glenn Johnson and Warren (Fivey) Siegel. Bethesda will lead with Dave Parkinson, Dick Latimer, Ken Poerstel, Mike Bollo and Jack Towne.

Four other District interhigh teams play today. Western invades St. John's, frosh, Collidge entertains Gonzaga and Anacostia plays Devitt Prep at Anacostia. All four games begin at 3:30 p.m.

Fleet Boss Pays $167.60

Hialeah, Fla., Feb. 9 (AP).—H. A. Grant's Fleet Boss, a son of the famed War Admiral, surprised a large throng here today when he captured the featured Sunset Isles purse and returned $167.60 for two.

Under lightweight veteran Freddie Smith, the rank outsider suddenly snapped loose from an extended slump, leading seven supposedly superior 3-year-olds home in little more than a common breeze. The bay colt completed the six furlongs three lengths on top in the smart time of 1:10 4/5. The surprise horse paid $61.40 for place and $13.90 for show.

Second position went to J. F. Smith's Montayr, also lightly played, by four lengths. Alfred Klee's King Midas, a stakes winner at Gulfstream Park, rallied to be a weak third.

Montayr, Alphara (which ran fourth) and control (fifth) are Flamingo Stakes nominees.

The Marshall Plan Needs One Thing More

A Federal Convention of the Democracies, Now

IN AN ARTICLE on "The Man-to-Man Way to Rebuild Europe," Owen J. Roberts, former U. S. Supreme Court Justice, said recently in Freedom & Union:

"Taken as a stopgap, the Marshall Plan can be helpful in gaining the time needed for a cure. But taken as the cure itself, it is sure to aggravate existing divisions and create fresh disputes between the nation-states involved.

"In the last analysis, the answer to the international problem it seeks to solve is not economic, but political."

What did he mean by that?

He meant that if the free men of Western Europe and the United States are ever to know lasting peace and prosperity, they must join themselves together as fellow-citizens for united action in a Transatlantic Federal Union of their own choosing . . . just as the free men of the thirteen American states joined themselves together to form the United States. He proposed that the Democracies meet in Convention now to form another such union.

Like the good lawyer he is, Justice Roberts produced convincing evidence to support his statements.

"Union," he pointed out, "puts all recovery efforts within a union on a citizen-to-citizen basis. Nationalism leaves such recovery efforts on a nation-to-nation basis. The psychology of the two methods is contradictory."

We are Risking Our Best Assets

He pointed out that the Atlantic democracies are our natural friends . . . but that we risk losing them by present recovery methods for "every time you lend, you lose a friend."

He pointed out that this country has, in recent years, spent at the rate of five thousand million dollars annually for the needs of Europe and he asked, "Has that national largess improved our relations with the Transatlantic Democracies? The evidence seems all the other way."

He pointed out that "free men are the best assets we have outside the U. S.; men who think and act like ourselves. Such are the citizens of the Western European Democracies. It has taken long to condition human beings to live in tolerance and freedom to the degree they so live today in a democracy. That slow achievement can be quickly destroyed."

He pointed out that "the best evidence that a common economy is built successfully on a common federal citizenship is the U. S. itself. Our people cannot have a problem of Massachusetts aiding Mississippi, or Florida aiding Montana" . . . "Within the entire area of the common citizenship, free enterprise plays its role in restoring normal trade and normal industry."

Union of Europe Alone will Not Save Us

He pointed out that "it is futile to suggest that the nations of Western Europe federate while the U. S., the pioneer and most powerful democracy, stands aloof . . . When shall we learn that we need such a federation, as much as they, to save the values of the free way of life? Will it take yet another war to teach us?"

He pointed out finally that "the present timetable provides a stopgap only until April" and said "Surely this huge problem requires more consideration than that. Surely it cannot be solved either by a purely European meeting in Paris, or by fiat of Congress alone."

Then, having presented his evidence, Justice Roberts suggests this two point program:

1. That the United States call "immediately a federal convention of the democracies to work out a plan to achieve recovery and peace by federating them in a Transatlantic Union."
2. That the United States meanwhile extend "aid to Western Europe for the coming fiscal year as provided in present plans, while making clear that this is aimed at gaining the time needed to achieve Union."

Adding step No. 1 would accomplish much. Not only would it remove the present rich-uncle-poor-relation curse which weighs so heavily upon our present emergency program of aid to Europe; it would also open the door to the type of man-to-man and citizen-to-citizen mutual aid that our own Federal Constitution created so successfully in 1787.

What less . . . and what more . . . can any practical man ask today?

Langer Planning To Merge Bills For Increased Pay

PAY RAISES: Yesterday produced several new developments on the Federal pay raise drive. They were:

1. Chairman Langer of the Senate Civil Service Committee said he plans to merge into a single bill the dozen measures before his committee to raise Federal salaries. These bills are:

Separate measures to raise salaries of postal workers and Classification Act employes by flat amounts ranging from $600 to $1000 each, and the Flanders-Baldwin bill to lift the $10,000 ceiling on Classification Act salaries and to give $5000 increases to Cabinet members and other Federal officials.

2. Langer also said he was planning to revise his $1000 flat bill to give employes in the lower pay brackets a larger dollar increase than people in the middle and high levels.

3. The break in the commodity markets has had its effect on pay legislation. Several committee members, it was learned, are now insisting that any Federal pay raise be temporary and be tied to the cost of living. These Senators believe that the commodity break will force down living costs and they would hesitate to vote for a bill that would offset living costs at this point. One Senator has suggested that the pay of Federal workers be adjusted every time the cost of living index varies 10 points.

4. Senator Taft, the GOP leader, got behind a general pay increase bill. He said that Federal salaries should be about 60 per cent above prewar levels. The cost of living is up about 67 per cent, but Taft foresees a downward trend and a leveling off at about 60 per cent above prewar.

The salary of the average Classification Act employe is about 32 per cent higher than it was in 1940. However, this doesn't mean that Taft would support a general 18 per cent pay bill for Classification Act people. Other factors such as promotions would have to be considered.

At yesterday's hearing before the Senate committee, Paul Sifton, testifying for the CIO, urged immediate approval of the Langer-Chavez bill to give each Federal employe a $1000 increase in pay. Further, the CIO spokesman said that Federal services should not be impaired to provide funds to raise salaries. It demanded additional funds be appropriated to foot the bill. The $1000 bill also was supported by Milton Kelenson of CIO's left-wing United Public Workers.

Charles Stengle, representing AFL's American Federation of Government Employes, proposed a flat $800 pay raise. He said today's Federal worker dollar has "shrunken disastrously" and that pay legislation is a "virtual emergency." Stengle said the Federal worker dollar of 1940 is now worth only 60 cents.

Langer scolded Stengle for urging only an $800 increase. He accused the AFGE spokesman of speaking against the Federal employe. He charged that the average Federal worker would have $1.02 a week less in real money than he had in 1939 of the AFGE's $800 plan was approved.

Foster J. Pratt of AFL's Technical Engineers, Architects and Draftsmen, urged the committee to lift the Classification Act ceiling from $10,000 to $13,300. He told the chairman that his $1000 bill was computed on the basis of a $3000 employe. He urged the same percentage increase for employes in the higher brackets. Pratt said the Navy was losing many of its skilled technicians because of the low pay.

Mrs. Dorothy Waleski of 2221 King pl. nw., the mother of two children, told the committee that she was unable to make ends meet on her husband's Army Department salary of $97.79 every two weeks. She said they had been forced to sell their war bonds to meet living expenses.

Bernard Duck, 29, a Patent Office employe of 4615 Hanna pl. se., said he went into the "red" about $1100 last year trying to provide for his wife and three children. His base salary is $3397. He said the proposed $1000 increase was too small.

RETIREMENT: Federal workers who are now eligible to retire are in a pickle. They must make a prompt decision, whether to retire under the present law, or under the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson bill which seems sure of approval. What's the advantage, if any? This is the answer of retirement experts to that question:

If your average salary is $2500 or less and if you've been in Government up to 30 years, you'd be better off to retire immediately under the present law and take the $300 annual increase in your pension as provided in the Langer-Chavez-Stevenson;

But you'd be better off if you'd wait to retire under the pending bill if your average salary is between $2500 and $3500. Also, if your average salary exceeds $3500, you'd get a higher pension, generally speaking, if you waited to retire. However, there are exceptions to this general rule.

Another general rule is this—that it's to the advantage of most employes with between 30 and 35 years of service to retire under the new bill. And it's definitely to their advantage to wait awhile before retiring if they have more than 35 years of service.

'Streamline' Proposed for D. C. Permit Procedures

Gen. Young Favors $35,000 Program, Asks Comment of Those Affected

By Sam Zagoria
Post Reporter

A $35,000 program for streamlining and speeding present District permits proceedudes was presented to Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, Engineer Commissioner, yesterday afternoon.

The program was prepared by a special eight-man committee appointed by the District Commissioners last June. General Young said he expected the recommendations, if adopted, will "do a great deal to eliminate bootleg construction work in the District."

The committee, headed by S. R. Harrison, deputy engineer of streets, recommended establishment of a central permits bureau in Room 108 of the District Building. In this room, now used by the Inspections Department, representatives of all departments involved in the granting of permits would be seated behind a three-sided counter.

Scattered at Present

Space would be provided for officials from the electrical, plumbing, building, sewer, water and surveyor's offices. At present, these offices are scattered throughout the District Building and some operate at limited periods.

Under the proposed plan, a person seeking a permit will be required to make only two visits to the central office, General Young explained. The first will be to obtain information on the type of permit required and to file an application for it. The second trip will be to pick up the permit and pay the required fees.

Answering of inquiries will be expedited by the location of 54 direct phones leading from the Permits Bureau to various units of the departments concerned. In this way, most information could be furnished immediately across the counter, General Young said.

Would Require 9 More Persons

Nine additional persons would be required to man the agency at cost of $28,000 a year. The remainder of the $35,000 cost would be set aside for installation of the telephones and counters, the Engineer Commissioner explained.

The committee proposed a "moderate" increase in permit fees and institution of fees for some types of permits where none is now charged. Within a few years, the fee income would liquidate intial costs and meet annual expenses, the committee declared.

General Young explained the program late yesterday at a meeting of officials from all departments affected by the proposed plan. He asked them to make comment on it within the week, after which he will submit the proposal to his fellow Commissioners.

If approved down the line and no legislation is required to place it into effect, he said it would be in operation about July 1.

Members of the committee, in addition to Harrison, were W. N. Handiboe, assistant chief clerk of the Engineer's Department; J. J. Ilgenfritz, deputy director of inspections; E. A. Press, assistant to the director, sanitary engineering; G. T. Santmeyer, architect; L. L. Kemp, builder; J. L. Bateman, plumbing contractor; J. A. Stone, electrical contractor, and C. J. Harnett, building contractor.

Official Blasts Parking Idea As 'Socialistic'

Howat Tells Expert From Pittsburgh Plan Won't Suit District

Pittsburgh's "socialistic" attempt to solve its parking problem is not for Washington.

This was the opinion delivered yesterday by P. Y. K. Howat, head of the District Motor Vehicle Parking Agency.

Howat's blast was prompted by the appearance here yesterday of Pittsburgh Traffic Engineer Donald M. McNeil who addressed a joint meeting of the American Automobile Association advisory board for the District (also headed by Howatt) and the women's safety committee of AAA.

McNeil said the mayor of Pittsburgh, faced by lethargy on the part of private interests, appointed a parking authority composed of businessmen to seek a solution. This authority, after a survey, decided to spend 15 million dollars to build 26,000 off-street parking spaces. It was planned, McNeil said, to finance the project through loans at 2½ per cent.

Expects Project to Pay

The Pittsburgh traffic expert said tthe project would "pay its own way" and that eventually the facilities would be owned by the city.

Later, Howat called the Pittsburgh plan "the most socialistic thing I ever heard . . . when you put the municipality in business." He said such a project would be "outrageous in the District" and that the job here should and will be done by "private interests."

McNeil's retort later was: "I'm certainly not surprised at one reaction here." Then he added:

"If private capital won't do the job, the Government has to. We've been trying to get them ot move for 10 years."

"12 More Lots to be Built"

He said inadequate parking facilities have cost the Pittsburgh downtown parking area 49,000 potential customers.

Howat told The Washington Post he knew of a dozen parking lots that "are going to be built" here by private interests. He said the locations must remain confidential for the present.

After the meeting at which McNeil spoke, Brig. Gen. Gordon R. Young, District Engineer Commissioner, said he felt private industry should solve the parking problem if possible.

"But if private capital can't do the job," he said, "then it must be solved by other means."

Officials Tour 6 Boys Clubs In Fund Drive

Metropolitan Police Boys Club officials made a whirlwind inspection of six clubs yesterday in their campaign to raise $125,000.

The funds are essential to continuing and expanding activities for the 13,000 members, John A. Remon, president, reported. Particularly needed, he said, is a new club at 6th st., between H and I sts. sw., to accommodate thousands of youths in that area.

With Remon on the tour were Max Farrington, executive secretary; Leonard Walsh, building committee chairman, and Lieut. Forrest L. Binswanger, director.

To date, $91,800 has been contributed. Police of 13 precincts have collected $80,758 from 35,000 adult honorary members.

Lawrence Peden Gets 5 Years in Dope Trafficking

A Washington man drew a five-year sentence in the United States District Court for Eastern New York yesterday on a charge of trafficking in narcotics.

The Treasury Department here identified him as Lawrence W. Peden and said he was believed to be one of the principal sources of supply for dope dealers and addicts in the Washington area.

The Treasury Department said Peden was arrested last September as he was boarding a plane for Washington at La Guardia Field, New York. The Treasury said he had in his possession three gains of pure heroin.

Peden gave his address then as the 1000 block of Massachusetts ave. nw.

Virginia Caucus Names Candidates for Offices

Richmond, Va., Feb. 9 (AP).—Democratic caucus to nominate candidates for attorney general and a Richmond City Circuit Court judgeship will be held tomorrow at 11 a. m.

Representative J. Lindsay Almond of Roanoke, and former Delegate John Spiers of Radford, are seeking the nomination for attorney general.

Trial Justice Harold F. Snead is being mentioned for the Richmond judgeship.

Senate Asked to Set Patrick Henry Week

A Virginia General Assembly request for a national Patrick Henry Week was presented to the Senate yesterday.

Senators Robertson and Byrd, Virginia Democrats, offered a joint resolution requesting the President to proclaim the week of June 6, 1949, in commemoration of the 150th anniversary of Henry's death.

Robertson gave the Assembly's request to President Truman, but was informed the Chief Executive usually follows the custom of limiting his proclamations to those authorized by Congress.

Md. Man Granted Stay of Execution By Judge Holtzoff

Associate Justice Alexander Holtzoff yesterday granted a stay of execution from Februray 20 to April 9, to condemned killer Floyd P. Wilson, 33.

At the same time Justice Holtzoff expressed surprise that Wilson's attorney, Clifford H. Allder, had not yet made an appeal for executive clemency. The jury which found Wilson guilty last June added to its verdict a strong recommendation for mercy.

Allder said court technicalities had prevented him from filing such action but Justice Holtzoff advised the defense attorney to file the plea for executive clemency now and said he would talk to the Justice Department if it was questioned.

Wilson, Riverdale, Md., carpenter and father of five children, was convicted of killing Milton E. Lowe, 48, in February, 1947, during the attempted holdup of a Giant food store at 3924 Minnesota ave. ne.

Double Anniversary

Sam Hardy, 69, document clerk and messenger for the House Ways and Means Committee, had a double celebration yesterday.

It was his thirty-fifth wedding anniversary and his fortieth anniversary as a Ways and Means Committee employe.

Hardy, 1825 S st. nw., joined the committee staff in 1908 under chairmanship of Representative Sereno E. Payne (R., N. Y.) and has remained under eight subsequent chairmen. He married Miss Nancy Brown in 1913, on the fifth anniversary of his committee job.

Yesterday, on floor of the House, both Representative Daniel A. Reed (R., N. Y.) and Jere Cooper (D., Tenn.) of the Ways and Means Committee, praised Hardy's services. Said Reed: "In his long and unselfish service will be found . . . an unwavering beacon for all public servants."

Charles E. Pynchon

Funeral services for Charles E. Pynchon, 65, former Government official, will be held at Christ Church, Winnetka, Ill. at 2 p. m. today. He died in Evanston, Ill. on Friday after a long illness.

Mr. Pynchon was formerly assistant director of the Public Works Emergency Housing Corporation here and in 1934 was appointed general manager of the Federal Subsistance Homesteads Corporation in the Department of the Interior.

An ative of Chicago, he lived in Washington during his Government service, and returned to Evanstonin 1938. He is survived by his son, Charles Edward, jr., of San Francisco, a brother, Harold C. of Chicago, and a sister, Mrs. Seth Shepherd of Evenston.

Mrs. Georgia M. Jones

Funeral services for Mrs. Georgia M. Jones, 63, will be held at 2 p. m. today at the Harmony Methodist Episcopal Church, Hamilton, Va. She will be buried in Hillsboro Cemtery.

Nonresident Students Win Stay Order

Letts Promises Decision Soon On Right of 38 To Free Schooling

Thirty-eight nonresident students attending Woodrow Wilson High School were told yesterday they can remain in school here for at least another week without paying tuition bills.

Justice F. Dickinson Letts of District Court continued a temporary restraining order which prevents District Superintendent of Schools Hobart M. Corning from expelling the students until the court has time to determine the merit of their claim to free schooling.

After hearing arguments, Justice Letts said he will give his decision in a week or 10 days.

Others Already Expelled

If the court decides against the students, all residents of Maryland, the District government will be reimbursed for their schooling since February 14 by a $500 bond posted by parents. In question are tuition bills of $97 per student for the September to February term.

Thirty-seven other students who have the same claim but are not covered b ythe restraining order, already have been expelled.

A second restraining order to prevent dismissal of Herbert Clarence Young, jr., 6413 Elliott st., Hyattsville, Md., from Macfarland Junior High School will be heard by Justice Letts next Monday. The boy's father, a Metropolitan police detective, claims in the suit that District employes should not have to pay to send their children to District schools.

Assistant Corporation Counsel Milton D. Korman, representing Dr. Corning, said if the parents "are so desirous of sending their children to District schools where they get something better than in Maryland schools, let them pay for it."

Act Effective July 25

Korman argued that the students were not entitled to attend schools free since they had not been in attendance before July 25, effective date of the 1949 District Apropriations Act.

That act ended free schooling previously given to children of parents who worked in the District but exempted those already "enrolled" in District schools.

Korman said it was the intent of the act to exempt only those students whose schooling would be interrupted and not those who had only "registered" for the September term.

Michael J. Keane, attorney for tthe students and their parents, said that none of the 38 students had attended District schools before July 25 but because they had signed up for classes before that date were "enrolled."

Traffic Ticket Adjustments Up 38 Due to Storm

Traffic tickets adjusted in Washington last week numbered 38 more than the previous week's total of 127.

Police reported that cars broken down, skidded or pushed, cars unable to get close to the curb because of ice and snow, and persons who were too sick to move their cars, accounted for 31 of the 165-ticket adjustments during the week..

Among those who had their tickets adjusted were three who claimed diplomatic immunity. They were Dr. Benjamin R. Castro, 3400 Garfield st. nw., son of the El Salvadorean Ambassador; George B. De Oliveria, who lives at the Wardman Park, and is employed by the Brazilian Embassy and Anthony C. Coo of the Chinese Embassy.

Tally of adjusted tickets, by precincts, showed 16 for No. 1; 8 for No. 2; 22 for No. 3; 6 for No.4; 6 for No. 5; 12 for No. 6; 10 for No. 7; 9 for No. 8; 3 for No. 9; 31 for No. 10; 3 for No. 11; 6 for No. 12 and 12 for No. 13.

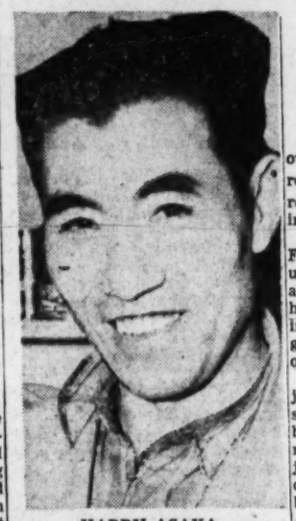
Ju-jitsu, Pistol Foil Attempts At 2 Robberies



HARRY ASAKA

SHELBEN MIDJETTE

Japanese Floors Armed Intruder; Cafe Owner Kills Night Interloper

A cafe proprietor and a store owner yesterday prevented the robbing of their respective cash registers by fighting it out with intruders.

Harry Asaka, proprietor of Friend's Market, 1634 11th st. nw., used self-taught ju-jitsu to floor a would-be robber who confronted him with a .22 caliber target pistol in his store about 4:45 p. m. The gun went oy in the scuffle, but no one was, hurt.

Much earlier, Shelburn O. Midjette, 33-year-old Navy veteran, shot and killed a man who had broken into Midjette's Sail Inn restaurant at 110 H st. nw. Midjette wounded himself in a thumb during a wordless scuffle with the burglar about 2:30 a. m.

Self-Taught Ju-jitsu

Although Asaka never studied wrestling in his native Japan, he had read about it in the United States, where he has lived since he was 13, he explained after his encounter with the would-be robber.

The latter, listed by police as Hollie Houston, 25, laborer, of 1501 Vermont ave. nw., was waiting for Asaka to open up the cash register when the Japanese upset his plans. Remembering a demonstration here last summer, he struck Houston's arm and spun him around. With a ju-pitsu armlock, he forced him to the floor and held him there while his wife, Irene, 33, called police.

The loaded weapon went off in the confusion and the bullit barely missed his wife, Asaka said. Four hundred dollars in his pocket and $75 in the cash register were untouched.

Police were holding Houston for investigation last night.

Midjette did not even realize he had hit the robber with a bullet from his .32 caliber automatic in the dark at the back of his restaurant, he told The Washington Post. The man ran out of the door after the struggle.

Police found the intruder, later identified as John Edward Austin, 26, dead a block away from the restaurant.

A soft-spoken, ruggedly built man of 190 pounds, Midjette discovered he had shot himself in the left thumb, so he hailed a taxi and went to Casualty Hospital. Doctors found his bullet had traveled from the base of his thumb to beyond the knucle, and loged there.

The cafe man said he had stayed to repair plumbing after closing Sunday night, with an assistant, William Grady, helping him. At about 2:30 a. m., he said, he heard a crash in the back of the establishment. From behind the bar he drew an automatic which he kept there because of three previous breaks.

Through another entrance, he reached the back door, found it had been broken in, and entered to find a "shadowy figure" looming near the cash register. He struck the intruder with his left fist, he said, holding the automatic against the man's back. The man wheeled and struggled. He fled after two shots were fired.

Midjette, who lives with his wife and three children at 406 Kennedy st. nw., said he had learned to use small arms during his three years with the Navy in the Pacific. There was only change in the cash register, he noted.

Austin's address was not known by police.

Bates Backs New Schools For Outskirts

Congressman Sees Buildings Needed In War-Boom Areas

New schools for outlying areas and other poorly accommodated sections of the District were favored here yesterday by Representative George J. Bates (R., Mass.), chairman of the House District subcommittee on fiscal affairs.

Commenting on a story in The Washington Post Sunday, Bates said the new building are undoubtedly needed in war-expanded areas. The story pointed up to the needs of buildings to accomodate the bumper crop of war babies just reaching school age.

A Board of Trade committee is studying the school plant to see if best possible use is made of buildings. Louis F. Bohraus and Don P. McAdoo head the group. Its report, due in three months, will recommend where new construction is needed.

Bates said he opposed abandoning old schools in built-up areas just because "some people want new buildings." School money should be used in areas where there are no schools of any kind, he said.

School enrollment figures show 107,352 students registered in January, 1938. Peak enrollment of the current year is 101,617.

Dr. William L. Peple

Richmond, Va., Feb. 9 (AP).—Funeral services for Dr. William Lownes Peple, 73, St. Luke's Hospital surgeon and educator who died Saturday, were held today.

Dr. Peples had been associated with St. Luke's since his graduation from the old Virginia College of Medicine. He held teaching posts with that school and later with the Medical College of Virginia. He served with the medical corps in the First World War.

Md. River Agencies To Discuss Cooperation

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 9 (AP).—Cooperation of the Interstate Potomac River Basin Commission and the Maryland Water Pollution Commission will be discussed at a meeting of the Marylanf group Friday.

Senator L. Harold Sothoron (D., Prince Georges), former chairman of the Potomac River group, and Edwin R. Cotton, executive secretary, will represent the interstate organization.

The session will be held at the office of Dr. Robert H. Riley, head of the Department of Health, at Baltimore.

15 Empire Collapse Suits Ask Damages of $800,000

Damage suits totaling $800,000 were filed in District Court yesterday as a result of the partial collapse of the Empire Building at 9th st. and New York ave. nw., December 16.

Four persons were killed and 12 injured.

The suits, 15 in number, were filed by Attorney Edward E. O'Neill. Named as defendants were Nick Papanicolas, also known as Nick Johnson, owner of the building, and the M. Cladny Construction Co.

George Papanicolas, an attorney and brother of the owner of the building, declined to say yesterday whether the defendant was covered by insurance.

O'Neill said other suits involving $75,000 more will be filed within two weeks. None of the suits filed yesterday was by persons related to residents killed in the building collapse.

The largest claim was for $200,000 by Earl Blankenship, of 926 L st. nw. His suit alleges that his wife has been a patient at St. Elizabeths Hospital since the disaster. He asks $100,000 because of his wife's "mental condition" and an additional $100,000 to compensate him for medical services for his wife and his own exposure and shock.

The suits claim damages for a number of reasons—personal shock and injury, loss of home and loss of personal property.

They allege that Papanicolas in remodeling the building at various times caused the structural support to be "changed and weakened."

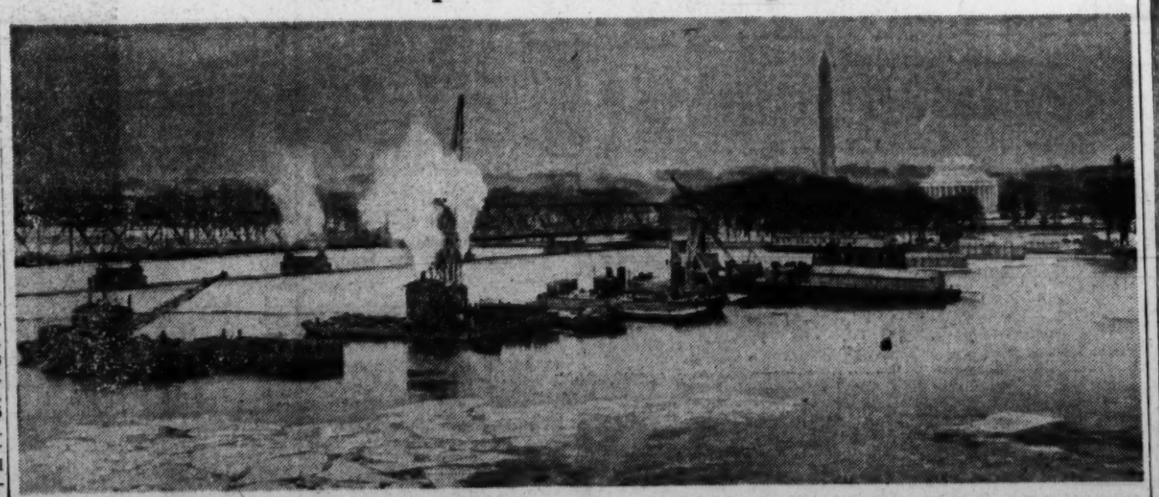
The suits also charge that the Cladny Co. "during the year 1947 . . . did negligently make structural changes in said premises which . . . weakened the structure and made the premises dangerous and unsafe."

Others who filed suit and the damages sought are:

James Melesourgas of 1135 7th st. nw., $10,000; Holmes Orndoff of 935 9th st. nw., $10,000; Roy Myers of 935 9th st. nw., $10,000; Otha Sullivan of 1344 Rhode Island ave. nw., on behalf of himself, his wife, Frances and their son, Rodney, 3, $60,000, and Arvid Bergland of 529 9th st. se., on behalf of himself and wife, Laura, $40,000.

Also, Mrs. Eva Gorzous and her daughter, Lola, of Baltimore, $75,000; James Temple of 816 K st. nw., $100,000; Miss Lolita Varlos of 721 3d st. nw., $5000; Mrs. Sophie Varlos of 518 H st. nw., $25,000; Livingston Burgess of 935 9th st. nw., $5000; Tillman A. Gaines of 935 9th st. nw., $15,000; Alice Hayward of 501 Greenwood rd., Linthicum Heights, Md., $50,000; George Smith of 3139 N st. nw., on behalf of himself and wife Maude, $35,000; and James Douffa of 1839 Burke st. se., on behalf of himself, his wife, Judith and infant son, Phillip, $160,000.

Neither Cold Nor Ice Stops Work on New Span



The Washington Post

WORK IN PROGRESS—Ice around the bridge under construction across the Potomac between the 14th st. Highway Bridge and the railroad bridge may make it hard on the builders, but the work goes on steadily. This view of the construction was taken from the center of the railroad bridge. When completed, the new span will relieve the traffic bottleneck between Washington and Virginia.

Defense Argument Bursts Into Flames

Attorney E. Roosevelt Page made a "fiery defense" yesterday for his deaf mute client, Alvin B. Fisher, 21, but it wasn't with eloquent language.

Page was defending Fisher, who lives at 415 First st. sw., on charges of assault and larceny preferred by Emma Lane Moseley, 36 Florida ave. nw. The plaintiff contended Fisher had stolen her pocketbook while she was in a restaurant last October 18, and that when she confronted him with the charge outside the restaurant, he knocked her down.

Judge Armond W. Scott commented dryly that Page's defense certainly was "fiery."

The jury found Fisher innocent on both counts after 10 minutes' deliberation.

bation for a burglary offense. Judge Stedman Prescott of Montgomery County Circuit Court fixed bond at $2000 and set February 23 as the date for a hearing on extradition proceedings.

Eviction Hearing Set

...Alexandria Redevelopment and Housing Authority's eviction suit against an Army veteran will be heard in Alexandria Corporation Court March 4. The date was set yesterday at opening of the new court term.

The ARHA began efforts to evict John M. Webster, a former Fort Belvoir soldier, from his Cameron Valley apartment last May following his discharge. The ARHA claimed Webster signed a lease agreeing to vacate the Government-owned housing development after his Army separation, but Civil and Police Court Judge James R. Duncan upheld Webster.

Other Volunteer Community shows this week are scheduled as follows: Tomorrow, Bethesda Naval Hospital wards; Thursday, Gallinger Hospital crippled children's wards, Upshur Street Hospital dining rooms; Friday, Soldiers', Sailors' and Marines' Club, Bethesda Naval Hospital wards, Andrews Field, and Sunday, Fort Belvoir Service Club.

The VCS is currently conducting a campaign to raise $25,000 to continue its show program.

Boy Finds His Tongue

Charlie, not quite five, blue-eyed and blonde, was taken in tow yesterday by Miss Marie Flores, 38, housekeeper at the Mexican Embassy, 2829 16th st. nw. She said she found the boy, who seemed to be lost, at 16th and Fuller st. nw. Even the embassy's warmth, milk and cookies didn't elicit his identity.

Reluctantly, Miss Flores called police. And quick as a little boy can say Charlie Hammerstrand, Charlie told them that, and gave his address—2519 University pl. nw. Mrs. Hammerstrand said her son attends kindergarten, and left yesterday ahead of his escort.

16 to Get King's Medal

The King's Medal, a British award for civilian service, will be presented to 16 Americans at ceremonies at the British consulate in Baltimore today.

The list includes Winston Boykin Jones of Hyattsville, Md. and the following Virginians: J. A. Brownridge, Joshua Garrison, Mrs. Edna M. Glass, Mrs. Bernice J. Millan, Miss Millicent P. Ryan and Charles E. Saurine, all of Arlington, and Mrs. Cecilia S. Van Cott of McLean.

Arlington Police School

A second retraining school for Arlington County policemen opened yesterday, with 40 officers enrolled in the five-day course. An earlier course, completed January 23, graduated 38 officers.

The school, which will continue through Friday with two hours of instruction given daily, covers laws of arrest and evidence, case preparation, laws of search and seizure and public relations.

Two Held in Burglary

Joseph V. Bell, 23, of 1321 Wiley ct. nw., and Leo Simms, 22, of 1325 Wiley st. nw., were held for grand jury action on charges of grand larceny yesterday by United States Commissioner Needham C. Turnage.

Bond for each was set at $1000. Police charge the two with breaking into the liquor store of Thomas Waller at 739 15th st. ne., last Saturday and stealing liquor and cigarettes worth about $1000.

Held on Probation Charge

Henry Richmond, jr., 21, of 1303 F st. ne., a truck driver for a Bethesda firm, yesterday was picked up by Montgomery County police on a complaint from New York authorities he had violated probation in that State.

Dr. Hemelt, 68, Authority on English, Dies

Francis J. Hemelt, Ph. D., associate professor of English at Catholic University, and an authority on old and medieval English, died at his home, 2707 Upshur st. Mount Rainier, at 1:10 a. m. yesterday. He was 68.

Dr. Hemelt

Born in Baltimore, Dr. Hemelt received his Doctor of Philosophy degree at Johns Hopkins University in 1913. He received his A. B. degree at Loyola College, Baltimore. His Master's degree was won at Johns Hopkins. He was elected to the Phi Beta Kappa at the latter university in 1911.

Dr. Hemelt later went to Catholic University as an instructor in English and was raised to associate professorship in 1915. During the first World War, he served as a special examiner for the United States Civil Service Commission and did editorial work for the Carnegie Foundation for International Peace, in conjunction with the State Department until 1920.

In 1922, Dr. Hemelt became an English instructor at McKinley High School and taught day and evening classes in the public school system until 1928. He then became dean of Columbus University, now Columbus University Law School.

Dr. Hemelt returned to Catholic University to teach and serve as an examiner in English for high schools affiliated with Catholic University. He also directed doctor's and master's degree theses in English.

In addition, he taught summer classes in English graduate work at universities in San Antonio, Tex., and Dubuque, Iowa; journalism at St. Agnes College, Mount Washington, Md., and lectures at Notre Dame Institute, Baltimore.

A charter member of the Phi Beta Kappa Association of Washington, Dr. Hemelt had been both its president and secretary. He was a regular contributor to Modern Language Notes, the Catholic Ecclesiastical Review, and the Catholic Historical Review. He was affiliated with the Modern Language Association of America and a member of Potomac Council, Knights of Columbus, a fourth degree Knight of Columbus, and a member of the Catholic Benevolent Legion.

He is sdrvived by his wife, Mrs. Theresa G. Hemlet, and three daughters, Mrs. Anne H. Singerhoff of Bethesda, Miss Lenore Hemlet of Mount Rainer, and Mrs. Grace Clark of the District; and four brothers, the Rev. Theodore M. Memelt of St. Mary's Seminary, Baltimore; Charles T. Hemelt, Baltimore; Anthony H. Hemelt, Washington; and Gerard V. Hemelt of Silver Spring, Md.

The funeral will be held at 10 a. m. Thursday in the National Shrine of the Immaculate Conception at Catholic University. Father Hemelt will celebrate the high requiem mass. Burial will be at Mount Olivet Cemetery.

Dr. B. E. Livingston

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 9.—Funeral services for Dr. Burton E. Livingston, retired Johns Hopkins University plant physiologist, will be tomorrow. Dr. Livingston, who would have been 73 today, died at Johns Hopkins hospital yesterday.

He was at one time permanent secretary of the American Association for the Advancement of Science and had been an active member of many scientific societies. For three years, from 1906 until 1909, he did research with the Carnegie Institute in Washington, and also had worked with the United States Bureau of Soils. From 1909 until his retirement in 1940 he was professor of plant physiology at Johns Hopkins.

Survivors include his wife, the former Margaret A. Brennan MacPhilips of Syracuse, N. Y., and a sister, Miss Jennie D. Livingston of Ann Arbor, Mich.

Pallbearers were Admiral Aubrey W. Fitch, retired, Vice Admiral Jules James, retired, Rear Admiral James L. Holloway, jr., Naval Academy superintendent; C. Forbes Colhoun, Prof. Richard J. Duval, Albert H. MacCarthy, Capts. Walter D. Smith, Clyde R. Robinson, William Taylor Smith, Harold V. McKittrick and Arthur F. Folz, all retired, and Comdr. C. Russell Burke, Naval Academy public relations officer.

Interment was in the Academy cemetery.

Author Speaks At Charter Anniversary

Williamsburg, Va., Feb. 9 (AP).—Paul Green, author of "The Common Glory" and "The Lost Colony," said today in an address at the college of William and Mary on the 255th anniversary of the granting of its charter that the principles of Democracy are identical with principles of truth.

"And as time has passed I have come to believe that they possess the righteous reality of a true religion," the Pulitzer prize winner for the play "In Abraham's Bosom,' told the capacity audience which filled Phi Beta Kappa memorial auditorium.

In a "roll call" of these principles, Green listed "the rule of the majority, trial by jury, freedom of the press and speech and assembly, protection of the minority, and the solution of problems by thought rather than by force.

"These may sound a little dull in the roll call," Green said, "but the problem is not to let them be dull in their activated use."

Dr. John E. Pomfret, William and Mary president, introduced the author. The Rev. Francis H. Craighill, rector of Bruton Parish Church here, gave the invocation and benediction.

Dr. Elsted to Speak

Burns Mantle, Drama Critic And 'Best Plays' Editor, Dies

New York, Feb. 9 (U.P.).—Burns Mantle, the theater's elder statesman and gentlest drama critic of them all, died today of cancer of the stomach. He was 75.

He had reviewed the theater for a half century and was its foremost analyst. At the time of his death he was critic emeritus of the New York Daily News and editor of "The Best Plays," a series of American drama yearbooks he began in 1920.

Mantle probably was the only critic beloved by people of the theater. As a fellow critic put it. "He just wouldn't cuss and call names."

He expressed his views of his critic's job in a farewell note to his successor on the Daily News, John Chapman: "Broadway is your oyster. Open it. Season it with a dash of salt and a lot of pep—but go easy with the tabasco."

Mantle was born in Watertown, N. Y., December 23, 1873, and began his newspaper career in California as a printer's devil for $9 a week. By 1892 he had become an expert linotyper for the Denver Times.

The stage-struck printer often set the long-hand reciews of the Times drama critic and after rewriting an undecipherable review was allowed to write a Saturday column of theater notes. Six years later he became drama editor of the Times, and after three years shifted to the Denver Republican. From 1901-06 he worked as drama critic of the Inter-Ocean in Chicago and later for the Chicago Tribune.

He became the Tribune's Sunday editor in 1908, but "after printing the story of the Hope diamond three times" decided the job was not for him. In 1911 he became drama critics for the New York Evening Mail, a post he held for 11 years. He moved to the Daily News in 1922.

s Daily News critic, Mantle invented the now popular "star system' 'to simplify for readers his evaluation of a play. Four stars at the top of his review signified "excellent"—the top rating.

Ex-Senator Frelinghuysen Of N. J., Dies

Tucson, Ariz., Feb. 9 (AP).—Joseph Sherman Frelinghuysen, who served as United States Senator from New Jersey from 1917 to 1923, died of a heart ailment last night. He was 78.

Frelinghuysen, a Republican, was born in Raritan, N. J., March 12, 1869. Early in life he welded together a large combination of insurance companies. He was president of the J. E. Frelinghuysen Corp. and the Stuyvesant Insurance Co.

His stanch support of prohibition was held responsible for his defeat for reelection to the Senate in 1922 by Edward I. Edwards, a Democrat.

He was a veteran of the Spanish-American War in which he served as a lieutenant in the New York Cavalry.

The body will be taken by train to Far Hills, N. J., where funeral services will be held late this week.

Frelinghuysen is survived by his wife, Emily, a son, Joseph, of Far Hills; two daughters, Mrs. Victoria Boles, Morristown, N. Y., and Mrs. Emily Bilkey, New York.

C. M. E. Church Leader, Bishop Russell, Dead

The Rev. Charles Lee Russell, 64, presiding Bishop of the Sixth Episcopal District of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church of America, died of pneumonia in Newport News, Va., Sunday.

Bishop Russell, who lived at 1843 S st. nw., was visiting in Newport News. A native of Marvin, Ala., he had received degrees from Paine College in Augusta, Ga., and Dropsie College in Philadelphia.

Bishop Russell had held pastorates in Florida, Georgia, Alabama, Kentucky and Maryland, and was known for his ability to expand and build the churches to which he was assigned. Through his efforts Israel Metropoliton C. M. E. church, New Jersey ave. and Morgan st. nw. was able to burn a mortgage of 50 years standing in the early twenties.

He was consecrated as bishop in Hot Springs, Ark., in 1938, and became head of a diocese which extended along the East coast from South Carolina to Canada.

A student of Hebrew, Bishop Russell was the author of "Light from the Talmud" believed to be the only book in Hebrew written by a Negro.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Lillian Russell, a brother, John, of McGehee, Ark., and four sisters, Mrs. Callie Foster of Bashi, Ark., Mrs. Barzilia Gamble of Montrose, Ark., Mrs. Hallie Semple of Birmingham, Ala., and Mrs. Hayten Abrams of Marvin, Ala.

Funeral services will be held at 12 noon Thursday at Israel Metropolitan C.M.E. church. The body will lie in state at the church from noon Wednesday until 10 a. m. Thursday.

McGrath Says Women Could Elect 'Madame President'

By Genevieve Reynolds

IF AMERICAN women voted as a solid bloc for feminine candidates this fall, the next occupant of The White House might be addressed as "Madame President." So declared Senator J. Howard McGrath, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, in a luncheon address yesterday before members of the Woman's National Democratic Club.

That isn't all. According to McGrath's calculations, the all feminine bloc could put 32 "gentlewomen in the United States Senate," elect the entire House of Representatives, plus 33 Governors and innumerable lady mayors and councilwomen.

"Even the dog catchers would wear skirts," added McGrath.

But, he told the feminine audience, such a situation is not likely "in this year or any other year," because women do not vote in blocs. They are too thoughtful, too well informed."

Decisive Vote

Senator McGrath predicted that more American women will go to the polls in November, 1948, than ever before and that the majority of them will vote for Harry S. Truman. He pointed out the women's vote can be decisive because two million more of the gentler sex than men will be qualified to cast ballots this fall.

To the question, "what's the chance of women getting high posts, as they did in 1935, when 35 held important position?," the committee head answered, "the attitude of the present Democratic Committee is to go all out for women to see that they get better breaks than in the past few years."

Sees No Revolt

When asked if the rebellious Southern States would bolt the Democratic Party over the President's Civil Rights program, McGrath answered, "I believe the Southern States will support the nominees of the Democratic Party. I think the quality of the loyalty Southern States have shown in the past will prevail."

"It is a matter to be fought out in the party," he continued, "but I believe it can be done with substantial gains for the President's Civil Rights program."

Capital and Hat-Happy

Florell's New Creations Bold and Gay; Bondi's Pretty and Winsome

By Peggy Preston

FASHIONABLY speaking, Washington was hat happy yesterday.

Reason for this state of the Capital was a double feature attraction, starring Walter Florell and Peter Bondi, a couple of top-notch hat designers who descended on the town simultaneously.

Florell opened a two-day show at Erlebacher's and Bondi, whose hats are carried at Jelleff's, previewed his spring collection during luncheon in the Mayflower Lounge.

United in the theory that a woman's hat can be something really terrific, the two designers differ violently on their approach to the "problem." Florell, mad hatter of hatdom, likes 'em high, wide and handsome—with plenty of nonsense. Peter Bondi, on the other hand, prefers hats that are quiet, mild and winsome—but pretty.

"OLD LOOK, New Look—what does it matter?—it's the look that brings results that counts," says the capricious Florell, just back from Hollywood with a hatful of ideas.

Mr. Florell is in the habit of creating hats for such famous Washington women as Mrs. Joseph E. Davies and Mrs. James Forrestal. In Hollywood he bedecks the brows of the likes of Joan Crawford, Lana Turner, and as he puts it, "all the famous dolls."

He enjoys being playful about hats. Like the time he made variations of the same hat for youngster Shirley Temple and oldster Lady Mendl. "From 17 to 70," cries Florell, "and they both looked swell."

Costume designing was the original love of Austrian-born Florell. Arriving in this country seven years ago, he did the designing for several Broadway shows, but gradually wandered off in the direction of feminine headgear. Within a few short years, he has built up a one-million-dollar-a-year business and a firm that includes 70 "coworkers"—they're never called employes in the hat business.

Now, although he still does an occasional costume piece, Florell is strictly a hat man.

"Hats—they're wonderful," exclaims the blond designer who gets a big bang out of shocking customers by telling them his own hats look terrible on them. "I wouldn't want to do any other kind of work."

The hats in yesterday's show lived up to the reputation of their creator. Most of them were large and trimmed with exquisite, imported flowers and veils. Yet they were more restrained than those he has done in former years.

On the serious side, Florell explained, "Hats must be a little simpler this year because the clothes are so exaggerated. Hats are going to have to balance the silhouette."

But he hasn't become stuffy or lost his sense of humor. Florell hats are still guaranteed to make a male stop, look—and look again.

PETER BONDI'S show at the Mayflower attracted a full complement of guests. They applauded his snug-fitting hats with the rounded crowns and forward-jutting brims. His interesting versions of the Tyrolean hat were well received, as were his pretty felt and straw bonnets with one side of the brim hugging the cheek.

A newcomer in his field, Mr. Bondi has been designing hats for a little more than a year. "I tried to get into the business before the war," says the former GI Bondi, "but it was no go. After I got back from Europe my friends decided to humor me and then decided they actually liked my work."

Bondi has a nice color sense and uses green and tangerine shades in many of his hats. On the whole they are small and rounded although he has several large-brimmed numbers in his collection.

His prediction for next season is for still smaller crowns. "We have to have change," he explains. "Crowns have been large for several seasons now. They'll have to get smaller because they have no place else to go."

Underwood & Underwood

OH, THE FLOWERS that bloom in the spring! And where are the biggest, the gayest, and the most frivolous but on the hats of Walter Florell, playboy of the hat world, who is pictured here with three of his creations. Mr. Florell, a current visitor in Washington, is appearing today in person at Erlebacher's specialty shop

News From the Paris Openings

News from the Paris fashion openings reveal that the French designers, like their American contemporaries, have no startling style innovations to offer this year.

Even Christian Dior, the famous designer who is credited with having launched the "New Look" last season, has apparently decided to let well enough alone.

According to an Associated Press dispatch, Mr. Dior has refused to exaggerate his original theme of sensational lengths of skirts.

"He has retained last season's successful silhouette but had added enough new spices to make the dish more palatable.

"He uses waist-restricting corselets, very little hip padding, but makes his skirts full enough to cover three subway seats by setting full-length buckram petticoats beneath them.

"He has kept his hemline the same length as last season—13 inches from the ground—and in many cases has even raised it to about 14.

Reports by the Associated Press from other houses are as follows:

Balanciaga delved into the past of his native Spain for grandee caped cloaks and heavily embroidered toreador boleros in such colors as bright lime, glaring orange and bright vermillion.

Pierre Balmain unveiled a line of dresses and suits of chic wearability. He avoided frilleries, and his silhouette was refreshingly natural. He used neither waist-restricting corselets nor hip padding.

His skirt lengths were the same as last season. They lengthened with the shadows, 11 inches from the ground in the morning to 7 inches in the late afternoon.

The House of Molyneux displayed many dresses inspired by the 1880-1890 period. Some of them seemed to step right out of a Renoir painting. Umbrellas with ruffles, flower-decked straw hats, ruches and lingerie collars all matched the dresses.

The 1880-1890 inspiration of dresses provides straight skirts with a fullness brought around to the back. To achieve that result, ancient style tailoring and cutting has been revived.

Blizzard of Reservations

Jefferson-Jackson Dinner To Be Twins; Wadsworths Recall Gandhi Blessing

By Mary Van Rensselaer Thayer

COME FEBRUARY 19, the Jefferson-Jackson Anniversary Dinner is going to be twins! There never has been such a blessed event in politico - gastronomical circles. There's been such a blizzard of reservations for the $100 a plate dinner, it's overflowed the Mayflower into the Statler's biggest banquet rooms.

In order not to disappoint the bigshot customers, the committee has diplomatically bisected the goings on. President Truman will down his victuals at the Statler, broadcast from 10 to 10:30 at the Mayflower. Mrs. Truman, Miss Truman, the presidential staff will follow along behind, shepherded by Senator J. Howard McGrath, Democratic National Committee chairman, and Wilson Wyatt, dinner committee chairman.

Members of the Cabinet will be equally divided and there'll be two speakers' tables. Each dinner will star a feminine speaker. At one there will be Mary Norton, who has been in Congress since 1924 and is the dean of our lady legislators. At the other will be dynamic Helen Gahagan Douglas, California's congressional dream girl.

Among the 3000 expected will be the Mayor of New York and his cohorts, Governor Thurmond of South Carolina and his brand-new bride. Arranging entertainment, rounding up young girls to dress as Colonial belles and distribute programs, plus the myriad details of a double-jointed affair, have kept Wilson Wyatt and Mrs. George Mesta, his cochairman, moiling evenings in committee headquarters. The $100 dinner menu, incidentally, will be simple, minus extra bread and such, and will be duplicated precisely at both hotels.

Blessed By Gandhi

AROUND WASHINGTON very few ever saw Gandhi, much less were blessed by him. But Mr. and Mrs. Julius Wadsworth, who are strictly Episcopalian, have a unique double-barreled reference for Heaven, for they have been blessed by both the Pope and the late Mahatma. Back in 1937, when Julius Wadsworth was still in the foreign service, they were returning from China via India.

Gandhi was then at his country retreat north of New Delhi, and though they were anxious to meet him, it was too long a trip to undertake without a definite appointment. So they gave up the idea, settled for a visit to the India Congress, then in session.

There Cleome Wadsworth spotted an Indian lady, Sarajini Naidu, whom she's met at—of all amazing places—a poetry dinner in New York's old Hotel Brevoort. After an usher had corroborated Mrs. Naidu's identity, Cleome was led to the platform, reminded the Indian lady she had been taken to the dinner by Claude Bradgon, an intimate friend of Gandhi's. A rendezvous was arranged immediately and the following evening they arrived at Mr. Gandhi's country retreat in time for his twilight prayer meeting.

"Take Them Into Our Hearts"

THE MAHATMA walked in quietly, faced the small group. He closed his eyes, remained silent several moments. Then he spoke in Hindu. Cleome was fascinated by his animated expressions, the aliveness of his body. After finishing his talk he turned, translated what he had said into English. This is how Mrs. Wadsworth remembers it:

"You know, we have what are called the untouchables in India and I have asked this evening that we meditate upon how to take them into our hearts—not just accept the idea of their equality intellectually—but to really take them into our hearts. It is superstition and tradition to believe them unclean or unfit for personal relationships and we must put a great deal of quiet effort into the understanding of acceptance by the heart."

Gandhi used the word "heart" several times as if to impress them with the content of his meaning. He remained silent again for a few minutes, then walked toward the Wadsworths, welcomed them warmly. He mentioned their mutual friend, remarked that he was one of the few he had in the West. When Julius replied that the Mahatma was famous in the United States, Gandhi retorted smiling "Oh, I think I am notorious instead of famous."

"No Untouchables"

DURING HIS talk he had mentioned that the evening's donations would be considered as given in penance for not accepting the untouchables, and when Julius dropped some money in the collection box he remarked smilingly "But, Mr. Wadsworth, you have no untouchables in the United States!"

He seemed in no hurry to leave the Wadsworths and they felt he would have talked all night if they had chosen to remain. It was perhaps, his greatest power, an impression of immutable calm and leisure. As they left, Gandhi lifted his hand in the simple, traditional Hindu gesture of blessing. His face literally beamed, his eyes twinkled, his emaciated body radiated such terrific force and aliveness that the Wadsworths will never be able to believe his spirit has vanished from the earth.

In Capital's Bridal Procession

Baskets of flowers and candles decorated Petworth Methodist Church for the wedding February 6 of Miss Ethel Leonora Myers and Robert William Vinson. Mrs. Vinson is the daughter of John William Myersand the late Mrs. Myers, and Myers and the late Mrs. Myers, and William D. Vinson and the late Mr. Vinson.

Harris & Ewing

MRS. ROBERT W. VINSON

The Rev. John C. Millian officiated at the ceremony, and a reception followed at the Admiral Club.

Given in marriage by her brother , John William Myers, jr., the bride wore a white satin gown, fashioned with long train, and a veil of net held by a crown of seed pearls. Her flowers were white pompoms and snap dragons centered with an orchid.

Mrs. Robert Joseph Smith, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, gowned in aqua green with matching feather headdress and carrying a bouquet of yellow and orange flowers. Bridesmaids, Mrs. Dolphin W. Weber and Miss Patricia Ann Murray, wore orchid gowns and carried pink and fuchsia pompoms. Another bridesmaid, Miss Ruth Edwards, wore a fuchsia gown and carried orchid pompoms.

Robert Joseph Smith, broth-in-law of the bride, served as best man. The ushers were L. Hastings McClendon, William Boucher, also brother-in-law of the bride, and Dolphin W. Weber.

Married

Mrs. John Wesley Milstead, who before her marriage on January 31, was Miss Doris Madelynn Cockrill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Emmett Cockrill of Arlington, Va. Her husband is the son of Mrs. G. Thomas Milstead, also of Arlington, and the late Mr. Milstead

WHENEVER there's a benefit in the offing, up pops the problem of planning. So Mme. Bonnet, wife of the French Ambassador (center), who will open the French Embassy for members of the Pan Hellenic Association Saturday, February 14, goes into a huddle with Mrs. Clyde F. Finter, association treasurer (left), and Mrs. Ronald C. Kinsey, president of the group, at right. Mrs. Finter is in charge of tea reservations. Proceeds will go to the Pan Hellenic Foreign Student Scholarship Fund which this year will go to a French girl

First Lady Is Tea Hostess

MRS. TRUMAN and Miss Margaret Truman returned from their visit to New Orleans yesterday morning. In the afternoon Mrs. Truman was hostess at two White House teas, one at 4 and one at 5, with 200 guests at each tea.

THE Director-General of the Pan American Union and Senora de Lleras will be honored at a reception Friday evening by members of the White House and affiliated Spanish classes. The reception will be held at the Shoreham Hotel at 10 o'clock.

In the receiving line with the two guests of honor will be Mrs. J. A. Krug, Mrs. John L. Sullivan and Mrs. Tom Connally.

FORMER SENATOR AND MRS. BURTON K. WHEELER entertained at a small dinner last evening at their apartment at the Westchester. Among the guests were Senator and Mrs. Brien McMahon, Senator and Mrs. J. William Fulbright, Senator Clyde, Lieut. Gen. and Mrs. Albert C. Wedmeyer and Miss Marion Wheeler, daughter of the host and hostess.

FOR CAPT. AND MRS. WILLIAM MURPHY, popular visitors from California, Mrs. McCeney Werlich entertained yesterday at a cocktail party. The fete was at Mrs. Werlich's home on 16th st., from 5:30 to 7:30 o'clock.

MRS. KEEFE O'KEEFE will entertain at luncheon for a small group of friends in the Mayflower Lounge on Thursday. The party will honor Mrs. Russell T. Boyle, who, with her son and daughter, is sailing soon for Kyoto, Japan, to join Colonel Boyle.

MRS. GRACE E. FRYSINGER entertained Sunday evening in the Palladian Room of the Shoreham Hotel for the Finnish Minister and Mme. Jutila and their daughter, Vappu. Guests included Mr. and Mrs. John D. Clarke and Mrs. George P. Frysinger.

Others who entertained in the Palladian Room last weekend were Mrs. George Mesta, Representative Helen Gahagan Douglas, Peter Bondi, Mr. and Mrs. Auguste Boas, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hews, Mr. and Mrs. Claude Williams, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Norman Armour, Mr. and Mrs. Dow Harter and Mrs. Ollie James.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Mother Threatens to Leave Home and Husband To Punish Daughter, 17, for Making Her Life "Hell on Earth;" Girl Anxiously Asks Help

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am a girl 17 and my problem is my mother and myself. She is extremely sweet and pretty and one of those nice people. She has made all kinds of sacrifices for me, but we can't get along. We antagonize each other.

We are so different that it seems incredible we are mother and daughter. When she was young (she is now 54) she was very beautiful, graceful and ever so ladylike. I am just the opposite, dumpy and not very pretty, and I love the outdoors and tomboyish things; but my personality can't be too bad, as I have quite a few friends.

Our trouble started when I was about 12 or 13. Mom would buy me a very pretty frilly dress and I would want a plain suit. We would argue and mother would get hurt and I would be stubborn. Things got worse as time went on.

For the past two years there is hardly a week when we haven't had arguments and tears over money, boys, clothes, my friends, housework, etc. I have—and I am not proud of it—a nasty mean way of saying things to her in an argument that hurt her very much; but she also can say some pretty mean things.

She Likens Girl To Cruel Grandma

WHEN we are having a fuss she calls me by grandma's name, because she says I am so like her. For two years she has been telling me I grow more like grandma every day, in thought, word and deed. Grandma (my father's mother) is dead, but others besides mom have told me she was a mean cruel woman who would stop at nothing to get her own way; and she and mom didn't get along.

I haven't seen grandma since I was three years old and she hadn't any influence on my upbringing, so is such a likeness possible? And is there any hope for me, or shall I always be like her? I am very proud of Mom and brag to all my friends about her, and used to have great faith in prayer and would pray that we'd never quarrel again, but it hasn't helped.

We do sit down and talk things out, after which things go fine for about a week. Then her temper flares and so does mine and the vicious circle starts again. Mom says she is going to leave daddy and me and live by herself, where she will have peace and I won't be there to make her life "a hell on earth." I want to leave home myself but she won't let me. Please help me; I can't work this out alone. P. L.

Mother Fails In Leadership

DEAR P. L.: In this kind of problem, it is the parent, not the child, whose attitudes and influence are decisive in determining whether their relations shall be constructive or destructive, graced by reason and mutual consideration or ravaged by fierce emotional storms.

Thus the unhappy situation signifies that your mother has sorely failed in her responsibility to provide constructive leadership here. Because she hasn't known how to do better, she has forced you onto the wrong foot in relation to her since you entered the teens; and then, in baffled anger and disappointment at results produced, has held you to be the guilty cause of it all.

If it's true that your grandmother was a mean cruel woman who would stop at nothing to get her own way, then take it from me you're not the least like her. You are a sensitive, generous, loving nature; this is the spirit that breathes through your letter.

But also—and this is commendable, too—you are a strong character, enlivened by a positive sense of your own identity; and you have the honesty and vigor, the healthy integrity and instinctive intelligence, to assert and defend your inborn right to be yourself in many particulars; and not an echo or silhouette of your mother's ideas of how her daughter should be: as to looks, feelings, tastes, interests, etc.

Mother Presents Basic Problem

HENCE, the struggle, which on her part your mother translates into a bitter feud, into which she pours her frustrated resentment of your grandmother also—whose reputation for being ruthless in getting her way or having revenge on those who balked her suggests that she and your mother had a lot in common on that score.

They were too much alike to get along, and different only in surface-seeming, grandmother being boldly selfish, I gather, whereas your mother works deviously behind a facade of sweetness to manipulate or exploit others or punish them for thwarting her—evident in all you say about her, even though most of it is intended as praise.

Your mother is a typical "mom" as exposed by psychologists; a problem-personality in her own right, who engenders problems in relation to her children and burdens them with guilt for her own sins of omission and commission. This I say not in condemnation, but to help you understand her and to lift from your spirit a weight of anxious self-reproach that doesn't belong there—the only forms of help available to a minor in the circumstances, and which I hope may enable you to love her compassionately and yet safeguard your integrity against her benighted misuse of "feeling" as an instrument of torture. M. H.

Club Hears Of 'Quaint and Curious Quest'

Back in Warsaw, Mrs. Walter (Catherine) Besterman bred angora cats. She observed their habits, temper and action. One became the quintessence of all the felines she knew. So when she began writing a children's book, "The Quaint and Curious Quest of Johnny Longfoot," it was natural that a cat have a prominent part.

In Poland too, she learned about shoemaker apprentices at first hand. Then there was a stingy uncle whom she disliked. That's how she found her characters for her new tome which has been compared with "Alice in Wonderland."

These are the first hand details Mrs. Besterman gave when she appeared as guest speaker at the Town Club's luncheon held yesterday at the home of Mrs. Donald Hay, 1625 Kalmia rd., nw.

She told how she tried out the yarn on her son and some of his friends. "The juveniles approved and I wrote it," she explained.

Your Questions on Homemaking

My waffle iron has not been used for six years. I would like to clean and freshen it up before using again. Can you tell me the proper procedure?
A READER.

Rub off dust and other surface dirt with a paper towel. If necessary to loosen dirt, brush grids with a stiff brush. Then wipe off with cloth wrung out in mild soapsuds, rinsing by wiping with cloth wrung out of clear water. If there are brown spots on the outside of the iron, use a small amount of fine scouring powder and a soft damp cloth to remove them. After cleaning, leave iron open to dry thoroughly. Then reseason by applying a thin film of melted, unsalted fat to the grids with a pastry brush. Close the baker and turn on the current. (Set the thermostat at low on an automatic model.) Heat about eight minutes. Wipe off any excess fat with paper toweling.

I was interested in the question asked by V. M. C. in your column the other day about rolls that are soft on the inside and hard crusted. I thought she might be interested in hearing about a simple little trick I learned from my mother. She removes rolls from the oven when they are done, brushes them lightly on the top with butter, turns the pan upside down on a kitchen towel, puts a second towel over all. After a few minutes (five or so), the rolls are nice and soft. S. J. D.

I have an ermine hat which has turned yellow. Do you know of any dye which will give it another color and the process for doing it? N. G.

Clothing specialists of the United States Department of Agriculture say that white or faded fur can be dyed satisfactorily with regular hair dye. Follow the directions given on the dye package. For best results, fur should be dipped in the dye, but it can also be applied with a fine-toothed comb. Get the fur as clean as possible, either through persistent brushing or washing in warm, mild soapsuds before dyeing. After dyeing, let it dry, then shake and brush.

Water has been spilled on my light blue broadloom rug and small rust spots have formed where the legs of a chrome chair rested on the wet places overnight. The water was soiled from washing the floor and, when spilled, it left a large circle which still shows. I should like to know how to remove these rust spots and the large circular stain. I have heard of a lather cleaner for rugs. Do you recommend this? J. B.

The cleaner you speak of is a satisfactory one. Of course, in such spotting, you alwyas run the risk of making a clean place that shows because it's lighter than the surrounding area. It's inadvisable to try to shampoo the whole of a large rug yourself, however, because thorough rinsing is an impossibility and a considerable amount of dirt soaks into the backing, along with a residue of soap. Very shortly an unpleasant rancid odor will be noticeable. As to the rust spots, a special rust-removing soap obtainable in drug stores should help get rid of these. It comes in tubes and is sold, among other places, at a large chain drug store near the corner of 14th st. and New York ave. nw.

If There're Children at Home . . .

The feet of the 12-year-old boy are one of mother's major problems in more ways than one, for they seem to grow bigger and bigger each day. Think well before you equip him with a "Sunday" pair of shoes just because the ones he is wearing seem shabby. Too often the Sunday pair has to be given away because sonny cannot get into them. Put a little polish on the old ones and save money.

If the child's posture is poor, it is well to take him to the doctor for a checkup to see if the posture comes from a physical defect or just carelessness. If a physical defect, the sooner steps are taken to correct the trouble the better. Little bodies can be straightened out much more readily than older ones.

Nursing Baby Has Health Insurance

By Myrtle Meyer Eldred

There is an increasing tendency to encourage the new mother to nurse her baby and hospitals are offering better opportunities to do this. Self-demand feedings are in themselves an encouragement; as the baby who is to be fed whenever it cries to be fed, is ideally a breast-fed baby. Only in such case will there always be a supply of milk, at the right temperature and suited perfectly to the baby's digestion.

Self-demand nursings increase the supply of milk. It was in part, the rigid, four-hour schedules of the recent past which offered too little stimulation to the breast to keep it functioning properly. It has always been true that the greater the demand upon the breast, the greater the response, and vice versa.

Even before the baby is born a mother should adjust herself psychologically and physically to the idea of breast-feeding. If she feels a sense of distaste at any discuscion of it, her education in sex has been faulty.

During the last four months of pregnancy it is wise to prepare the nipples for their duty. A scrubbing with soapy water daily and a gentle massage with warm oil will do much to do away with early tenderness.

Nursing babies cry, too, but it is even more easily possible to suit all types of babies with the food nature provided than to adjust a bottle formula to individual needs. And breast feeding offers an insurance against the dread infantile diarhea to which bottle babies are ready victims.

The close relationship of the mother to her nursing babe, which gives him a sense of being protected and loved and nourished, is the very foundation of a happy, well-adjusted personality. There could be no greater gift to him.

Blue Plate Mayonnaise —First for FLAVOR

FISH VINAIGRETTE

One of the nice things to do with a small amount of leftover baked or boiled fish is to make this tasty salad. Also makes a fine sandwich filling.

For each cup of leftover cooked fish, use:
4 tablespoons minced celery
2 tablespoons minced green onion tops
1 teaspoon prepared mustard, if desired
3 tablespoons Blue Plate Mayonnaise
1 tablespoon vinegar

Flake fish and remove bones. Add chopped greens to fish. Mix Blue Plate Mayonnaise, vinegar, mustard together, then stir into fish. Chill well. (Blue Plate Mayonnaise is seasoned to be just sweet enough—just tart enough. Made with the finest salad oil, blended vinegars, selected eggs, and spices.)

Made by the Wesson Oil People as you'd make it at home —using the finest salad oil

23 War Dead From Area Due On West Coast

The second Army transport bearing war dead from the Pacific to this country for reburial is expected to dock tomorrow afternoon in San Francisco with bodies of 2792 servicemen aboard.

Eleven District dead are on the ship, the Department of the Army announced. Also aboard are 47 from Virginia,6 of them from nearby, and 36 from Maryland, including 6 from the Greater Washington area.

The returning war dead were disinterred from cemeteries throughout the Pacific. A large number of the bodies had been concentrated at the mausoleum in the Hawaiian Islands after smaller mid-Pacific island cemeteries had been evacuated, the Army said. Majority of the remainder were taken from cemeteries at Guadalcanal and Brisbane and Sydney, Australia.

Next of kin have been notified. After docking tomorrow aboard the transport Cardinal O'Connell, 10 days to 3 weeks may elapse before the bodies reach home towns or national cemeteries for final reinterment, according to the Army.

Regional Quartermaster Distribution Centers will again notify next of kin before bodies are brought under soldier escort for reburial. Most Greater Washington dead will be shipped from San Francisco to the Philadelphia distribution center.

World War II deceased from the District and their next of kin are:

Here's How To Be Healthy, Say the Experts

Want to be healthy, lady? If so, take yourself to the doctor, the dentist and the psychiatrist at least once a year for a check up. This is the advice given by a group of experts last night in a panel discussion at the D. C. Business and Professional Women's Club's meeting held in the United States Chamber of Commerce Building. Participating on the "Lady be Healthy" forum were Dr. Elizabeth Parker, president of the D. C. Women's Medical Association; Mildred Dickerson, dentist; Anna Coyne, psychiatrist on the staff of St. Elizabeth's Hospital and Dr. Irma Gene Nevins, local club president and national federation health and safety chairman.

Dr. Parker pointed out that a business and professional woman's budget doesn't allow for sickness and accidents and that it is better to have the yearly physical to prevent serious illness from creeping up.

Dr. Nevins put it this way, "Are you going to be a statistic? If you have an accident you become a statistic. One fourth of all accidents are preventable."

She told of the 238 people killed in home accidents and the 77 traffic fatalities in the District of Columbia last year and urged greater safety measures.

Serving as panel moderator was Dr. Alma Jane Speer, health and safety chairman of the local club.

Full Hiplines Popular Fashion

Betty Vincent, fashion consultant and educational director for Formfit Co., will conduct a two-day educational training class for corsetieres here on February 16 and 17. The training sessions will be held at the Statler Hotel.

According to a recent survey made by Formfit Institute, the American woman is well prepared for the latest fashion silhouette which calls for full hiplines. Miss Vincent contends that 42 per cent of the women in the United States have the "full hip figure type" which is now popular.

Symphony Fund Drive Watched by U. S. Conductors

The Nation's leading conductors have wired their interest in outcome of the National Symphony's $165,000 campaign which enters the second week today.

First complete report on the campaign will be given Thursday at a luncheon at the Mayflower Hotel.

Among those who have wired their interest in the Washington orchestra's campaign are Bruno Walter, musical director of the New York Philharmonic; Saul Caston, conductor of the Denver Symphony; Pierre Monteux, conductor of the San Francisco Symphony; Eugene Ormandy, musical director of the Philadelphia Orchestra; George Szell, conductor of the Cleveland Orchestra; Fabian Sevitzky, conductor of the Indianapolis Symphony; Alfred Wallenstein, conductor of the Los Angeles Philharmonic; Thor Johnson, conductor of the Cincinnati Symphony, and Reginald Stewart, conductor of the Baltimore Symphony.

Wheeler Allowed $5000 Bond in Md. Rape Case

Rodney F. Wheeler, booked by District police Saturday on a charge of raping a 14-year-old girl on Christmas Eve, was put under $5000 bond yesterday by Municipal Court Judge George D. Nielson, over the protest of Assistant United States Attorney Stafford Grady.

Wheeler faced extradition proceedings to Montgomery County, Md., which were continued for a month at the request of Francis X. Walsh, Wheeler's attorney. Grady told Judge Nielson that after a talk with Montgomery County police he didn't believe it "wise" to release Wheeler on bond.

Nielson said that under the law, people in the District charged with rape have access to bond, and that he saw no reason why Wheeler should be denied that right. Wheeler did not obtain a bond yesterday.

. . . reporting from Paris

Legroux was the millinery line we saw. All the models had upswept hair-dos with curled bangs. The hats are all worn forward and looked very much like those in Grandmother's closet; small with crowns about one inch deep or disappearing into the brim—coolie effect. All were very feminine, lots of small mesh veiling (in colors dyed to match the rough straw of the hat) tied under the chin. A very dark—soft tone green was used over and over again. The models wore originals from various houses and wore this dark green with navy or black. We saw the same millinery trend at Lelong's later. His models all wore their hair sleek in the front with a large bun placed so far up it ended about the bottom of the ear with these little forward-fitting hats sitting over their eyes.

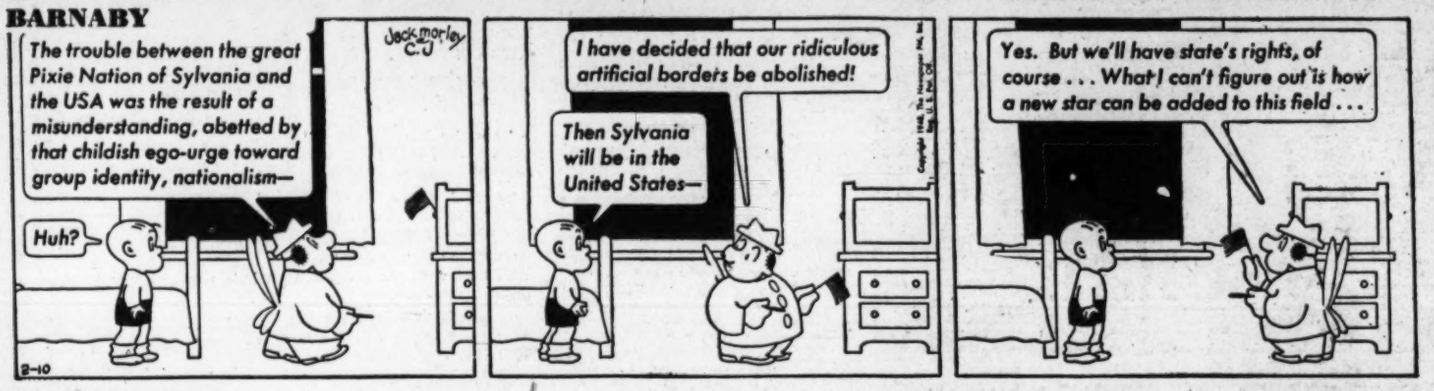
DON'T BE NOIVISS. I GOT ALL TH' CONFIDENCE IN TH' WOILD!
YOU! WHO AST YA?

BARNABY



The trouble between the great Pixie Nation of Sylvania and the USA was the result of a misunderstanding, abetted by that childish ego-urge toward group identity, nationalism—
Huh?
I have decided that our ridiculous artificial borders be abolished!
Then Sylvania will be in the United States—
Yes. But we'll have state's rights, of course . . . What I can't figure out is how a new star can be added to this field . . .

MICKEY FINN

I WONDER WHY MRS. CASEY DIDN'T WANT TO EAT WITH US, UNCLE PHIL?
I'M AFRAID SHE'S SORE, MICHAEL! SHE PROBABLY HEARD THAT I SQUAWKED ABOUT HER MAKIN' THIS TRIP!
WHAT DID SHE SAY WHEN YOU ASKED HER TO JOIN US?
JUST THAT SHE WASN'T HUNGRY YET — THAT SHE WAS GONNA WAIT FOR THE SECOND CALL!
OH, OH! I GUESS SHE'S SORE, UNCLE PHIL! SHE DIDN'T WAIT FOR THE SECOND CALL — HERE SHE IS, COMIN' IN NOW!
WELL, LET HER COME! I'M GONNA IGNORE HER FROM NOW ON!
WATCH IT, MRS. CASEY! WE'RE GOING AROUND A CURVE!

PENNY

TIME IS UP, CLASS. TURN IN YOUR PAPERS.
I JUST KNOW I FLUNKED, MISS BIRCH.
YOU PROBABLY DID VERY WELL, PENNY.

THE DISTRICT LINE by Bill Gold

Getting Rid of Money Suddenly Becomes Tough Job

Some weeks ago Y. V. sent me $5 in cash and asked that I contribute it to the penny milk fund. I wonder if she knew what she was starting.

I am now in a position to testify that contributing money to a specific department of the District government is not an easy task.

The supervisor of the penny milk program (Harry M. Gardner) couldn't accept the donation. Neither could Budget Officer Walter Fowler. Something about a law or something.

I finally wound up in the auditor's office. If I'd give my check to Bernard A. Harrison he'd fill out the necessary forms and vouchers and see that the kids got their milk money.

That was on January 13. The other day Mr. Harrison called me up. He said:

"I'm sorry, but we can't add that five dollars to the penny milk fund after all. We can put it in the District's general fund—but that isn't what your reader wanted, is it?"

"No," I agreed, "it's supposed to be used for the kids. Either in the penny milk fund or by Children's Hospital."

"Then I'd better return it to you," said Mr. Harrison, "because we can't put it in the milk fund."

The next day I got an official voucher from the auditor's office. In addition to my name and the amount of $5 recorded by some kind of business machine, it carried this legend:

"Check dated January 13, 1948, to credit of Bernard A. Harrison and endorsed over to the Collector of Taxes, in accordance with Commissioners' order of January 27, 1948. Pay to Collector of Taxes. Credit: Reimbursements 9564 Expenses—Penny Milk."

Was it a check or a receipt?

I couldn't decide, so I started asking everybody I met. The first answer I got was:

"It's a bill, you dunce. You owe the District five bucks."

I took an informal poll. The results came out like this:

Check.....36 per cent
Receipt.....33 per cent
Bill..... 6 per cent
Don't know...25 per cent

I took my voucher to the bank. The teller was all set to cash it until I confessed that I was just trying to get his reaction.

On guard, and eyeing me suspiciously, he referred me to a vice president, who squinted hard and then said:

"This is a receipt, mister. You owed the collector of taxes five dollars, and you paid it. That's your receipt."

WARM WEATHER BOY

Ah, how I wish it were true that "if you don't like Washington's weather, stick around for 15 minutes and it'll change."

This cold wave can change any time it's ready. I've been ready for weeks.

GIVE-AWAYS

"Four beautiful kittens, 4 months old." (Owens 5576).

I'M FROM MISSOURI

The markets flop and prices drop
Inflation's all but dead.
That's fine—and I'll believe it when
They cut the price of bread.

OVERHEARD

"I just can't understand why Eisenhower refused to be a candidate."

"Me, either. Maybe he feels that a former GI shouldn't be subject to a second 'draft.'"

YOU SNEEZE IT

Bob Schilling of Seminary Hill, Westminster, Md., is going to make himself very unpopular with our printers.

The item about the Capital City Spelling Club leads Bob to wonder whether they can spell "paraminobenzoyldiaethylaminoaethanolumphydrochloricum."

He says it ought to be in every medicine cabinet, because it helps to cure pneumonoultramicroscopicsilicovolcanaconiosis.

What I want to know is: how do you cure a guy from sending in words like that?

SOBERING THOUGHT

I got a letter yesterday from a former Washington Post carrier boy who is now attending the U. S. Naval Academy.

He makes me wonder whether my job is really as difficult as I like to pretend.

"You write the thing," he observes, "but I used to have to get up at 3 a. m. to deliver it."

BRICKER?

Under a picture of the winners of the Mary Worth contest, we recently printed a caption which said in part:

"Miss McNaught will appear as 'Beverly,' the beautiful, serious-minded Senator's secretary."

Mrs. R. W. Austin of 1331 14th st. nw. gets her bid in first with a note saying:

"This is a request for a formal introduction to that beautiful, serious-minded Senator."

Leonard Lyons . . .

NEW YORK—Jimmy Stewart, starring in Alfred Hitchcock's "Rope"—the movie based on the Leopold-Loeb murder case—suggested only one script change to Hitchcock: "The murdered youngster is a Princeton student. It makes me uncomfortable, because I'm a Princeton man myself." Hitchcock made the change, from Princeton to Harvard . . . Tommy Manville bought eight tickets on Canada's War Veteran Sweepstakes, the Grand National. He filed them in with the names of his former wives . . . Rosalind Courtwright, who made her professional debut last month at the Maisonette of the St. Regis, has done so well there that her option was renewed and she's been signed for Chicago's Palmer House.

Brooklyn's special grand jury which has been investigating the bail-bond racket may announce its findings this week . . . The first dispute, arbitrated under the new contract between the four networks and the Radio Writers Guild, involved CBS and a radio writer. The arbitration board was composed of eight men, four representing the writers and four representing the networks. All eight voted for the writer. Even the CBS man voted for him against CBS . . . Harry Mendel, the six-day bike race promoter who will promote prize fights in Chicago, leaves for Paris March 15 to see the bike races there and perhaps bring the troupe to New York.

Last week Maurice Turet boarded the New York Central's Chicagoan for Cleveland, to publicize his client, Eva LeGallienne, whose Ibsen repertory was having its pre-Broadway showing there. In the dining car Turet sat at a table next to one occupied by John D. Rockefeller, jr. The press agent ordered everything Mr. Rockefeller ordered . . . The chief steward smiled at him and said: "I see you're ordering like a millionaire" . . . "No," Turet assured him: "Mr. Rockefeller is ordering like a press agent on a swindle sheet."

Marshall's Plain Talk on Europe

By Drew Pearson

Secretary of State George Marshall did some plain talking on the "philosophy" behind his European Recovery Plan at a recent meeting with representatives of the United States Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Marshall

The Junior Chamber spokesmen had suggested to Marshall that the United States invite outstanding young farmers of other nations to an annual exposition for the exchange of information on livestock breeding, soil conservation and other farm techniques.

"That sounds like an idea worth considering," responded the Secretary of State. "It's in line with what we are trying to do—helping others to help themselves. There has been a lot of misunderstanding in Congress and elsewhere about our European reconstruction program.

"The job before us is not so much putting oil in heaters or food on the tables of people less fortunate than ourselves. It is to encourage others, to give them the incentive to improve their economic condition. We supply the tools, so to speak, but they do the work themselves."

Nobody can truthfully call that "Yankee imperialism," said Marshall.

"I remember showing some American films when I was in China," he added. "One was a picture called 'State Fair,' about a typical farming community in the Midwest. I showed it in a courtyard one night to some Chinese government officials. They were simply amazed that American farmers could work such vast tracts of land, produce so much and still have time to relax and enjoy themselves.

"Chinese farmers have to work practically all the time to eke an existence out of their little patches of land. We've got to help them and others to raise their standards. In doing so, we promote world peace and understanding."

Prizes to Farmers

One of Marshall's callers, Gregory Dozier, a young rancher of Texarkana, Ark., suggested that, under the Junior Chamber's plan, prizes might be awarded to young farmers who have made important contributions to agriculture in other countries. But the big inducement, he said, would be a trip to the United States.

"Say, for instance, ten youths in a small farming community in Italy are competing for the trip," explained Dozier. "The whole community will get into the spirit, and better production is bound to result. This ties right in with your efforts under the Marshall Plan, to help others help themselves.

"However, our main objective is to promote friendship and better understanding between farmers of the United States and other countries. The Junior Chamber is convinced that its plan will accomplish this."

"I think you have a great idea," responded Marshall. "The State Department is going to give it some serious thought."

Note—The Junior Chamber officials also got a favorable response from the Agriculture and Interior Departments.

What's in Tax Bill

Some Congressmen are just a little dubious as to what it was they voted for when the tax bill sailed through the House of Representatives the other day. For instance, in the closed-door session of the Ways and Means Committee which preceded passage of the tax bill, a unique debate took place regarding the provision for joint income-tax returns by man and wife.

This part of the bill stated: "The combined normal tax and surtax under section 11 and subsection (B) of this section shall be twice the combined normal tax and surtax that would be determined if the net income and the applicable credits against net income provided by section 25 were reduced by one half."

To explain this complicated legal jargon the committee called in tax expert Middleton Beavan. He tried bravely to reduce this language to simple English, but only got more snarled up than ever. Finally he shrugged his shoulders and gave up.

"We'll have an example worked out in the report," he said.

"We need to have a clear explanation," emphasized Tennessee's Jere Cooper, "in order to answer questions that will be propounded by other Congressmen."

Gray-Market Feudster

Three-hundred-pound Isidore Ginsberg, the alleged gray marketeer, broke off the Joint Congressional Housing Committee hearing the other day and promised to pay up all claims against him if the committee would call off an indictment being prepared by the District Attorney in Queens County, N. Y.

Rhode Island's Aime Forand snorted in disgust.

"How can we expect the people to understand this," he asked, "if we don't understand it ourselves?"

Wisconsin's Senator Joe McCarthy explained the committee has no power to call off a criminal action.

"But," the Senator reflected, "if you also promise to quit the gray market, we won't furnish the District Attorney with any information against you."

Ginsberg thought over the proposition for a moment, then decided it was not enough guarantee against prosecution. Without further comment, he waddled back to the hearing room to take up the feud where it left off.

I may not show it

I may not always seem to be . . . As ardent in my way . . . As you would like to think of me . . . Forever and a day . . . Perhaps I merely touch your cheek . . . When I should kiss your lips . . . And maybe when I ought to speak . . . Our conversation slips . . . But, darling, I adore you so . . . For everything you do . . . And certainly you ought to know . . . I think the world of you . . . I dream of you each time I try . . . To reach a greater height . . . And you are every reason why . . . The future looks so bright . . . I may not make my feelings clear . . . Or play the lover's role . . . But just the same I love you, dear . . . With all my heart and soul.
